Project raises concerns about protecting river

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Concerns that the Hawk Valley Estates project could hurt the environment generated much discussion at Wednesday's Stanhope council meeting.

While appreciating council's efforts to ensure the development will preserve the Kennisis River's natural state, the Halls-Hawk Property Association asked it to put such guarantees in writing.

Three partners have bought 1,600' of shoreline and plan to create a residential subdivision.

The association asked for three reassurances: no change in the natural appearance and habitat of the shoreline; no run-off which would affect the quality in the river and Halls Lake; and no change in the river bed or river course.

Reeve Harry Davis said these concerns will be addressed by the Ministries of Natural Resources and the Environment when the project goes in to the registered planning process.

Another concern about the project was raised during the public meeting portion of the council meeting. A neighbor of the development objected to the proposed by-law amendment.

The amendment calls for the rezoning of three severed properties just north of the Hawk Lake project.

Former IGA is rezoned again by council

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Minden council will once again temporarily re-zone the old IGA building to allow Archie Stouffer Elementary School to use it for class space.

This comes as good news for the board's business administrator, Jim Bradley, but he is cautious.

"Council agreeing to the rezoning is only Step One."

Now that the issue has been raised before council, a notice of the rezoning will be placed in the paper and the public will have 30 days to respond. If no objection is raised, the rezoning is passed.

The IGA building was re-zoned three years ago to handle the overflow of students from Archie Stouffer. At that time, objections were raised and an Ontario Municipal Board hearing was held to straighten out the problem.

However, this time around Bradley is much more confident about the public's reaction to the rezoning. "I think we have proven that the IGA building is a safe environment for the kids."

Bradley adds that some improvements have been made, which include fencing in the property. "I think we have proven to be a credit to the community."

Report blames flood's severity on embankment

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

If the municipality of Dysart et al had not built an embankment near Moss's Pond, the damage wrought by May's flood would not have been as severe, an engineer says.

"The failure of the Moss Road embankment resulted in more severe damages through the village than would have been the case if it had not been present," Fred Clayton, an engineer with Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates, said in a report to council.

Council discussed the letter in a closed portion of last Tuesday's regular meeting and did not comment on it.

In 1987, Clayton reports, his firm was hired to provide "preliminary information on the feasibility of constructing a flood control dam downstream of the pond. The site was selected by the municipality. We provided the municipality with a cross section of the existing water course and a line on the drawing indicating a level 600 mm above the top of the adjacent beaver dam."

When council asked his firm after the flood about the embankment, built just to the west downstream of the pond, Clayton said they didn't know anything about it.

"We had no involvement in the construction of the structure or the sizing of the culvert placed in the fill. We were not consulted, nor did we make any recommendations with respect to width, height, slope or type of material to be used. . . . The structure was not engineered."

It was the embankment which collapsed, and subsequently water rushed through Haliburton, flooding roads, houses and businesses in its wake. Council had been warned the water levels were high the weekend before the Wednesday flood. On the Monday, municipal crews were at the site and a municipal vehicle fell into the pond.

Clayton assumes "the road embankment failed by breaching caused by piping through the fill material and the failure time was approximately half an hour."

To find out the role the embankment had to play in the flood, Clayton used a computer program called DAMBRK. Impact was based on two scenarios: failure of the Moss Road embankment reflecting the conditions of May 23; failure of the beaver dam assuming the embankment was not present.

In the first scenario, "we assumed that the water level prior to failure of the embankment was at elevation 98.7 m, in accordance with the surveyed high water marks." When the embankment failed, water flowed out of the pond at a peak of 79 cubic metres per second, decreasing to 67 m³/s by the time it got to the mouth of the creek into the Drag River. There was no place along the way where the water could be stored.

If the embankment had not been there, "we assumed that the water level prior to failure would be at elevation 96.5 m, which was the normal water level behind the beaver dam. We assumed that the beaver dam failed in about five minutes. The peak discharge in this case is 19 m³/s," reducing to 16 m³/s at the mouth of the creek."

Since Tuesday's meeting, council has met with representatives of Frank Cowen Company of Princeton, which is handling the

'Rowdy' Ride for Sight is rejected

But vote is close as Minden business community supports the event

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Not wanting to condone what is often a rowdy party — no matter what the good intentions behind it — Minden council voted against bringing Ride for Sight back to the village.

After an hour of presentations by organizer Syd Collier and members of the public, the outcome seemed hinged on Councillor Mike Maher's vote. Reeve Ray Moore and Lewis Stevens were in favour of the Ride's return; Deputy-reeve Bern Berry and Councillor Bob Sisson were against it. Maher, who in 1989 had reservations about the event but voted in favour of it, didn't make his decision known until the final show of hands.

"It's a no-win situation," Maher said after council returned to the packed chambers after a 15-minute recess for council to discuss their views in private. Before Thursday's meeting, he said he had been warned by two businessmen not to vote against it or else "they would work against me" in the 1991 election.

"It's very, very important for the economy," he agreed with many of the presentations. However, he did not want there to be any cost to Anson, Hindon and Minden taxpayers and suggested the Ride post a $1-million bond in case there was any damage to the community centre during the event.

"I cannot support a wild weekend on our property," Sisson says of the two-day event. Some of the approximately 8,000 riders arrive on Friday and after being joined by the rest on Saturday, everyone has a party which has lasted until 4 in the morning. "We wouldn't let our own people do it."

Berry said he was one of the Ride's biggest supporters in the four years it came to Minden. However, last year organizers decided to take the Ride to Peterborough. They say it was because council dilly-dallied over giving approval; council said organizers had already made overtures to Peterborough.

"I would have been supportive today if it had been coming to Minden who depend on working for lodges, resorts and stores.

"It's the easiest thing to say 'No, we don't want it.' But there's a great deal of prestige in the fact we host Ride for Sight."

'I cannot support a wild weekend on our property. We wouldn't let our own people do it.'

year after year," Berry said. He also cited concerns about property damage, the lack of police protection and costs.

"We are representing the silent majority" who are in favour of the Ride, Moore said. "I have to look at the people who create the jobs. We have a service industry that supports this community. If we cannot (bring back the Ride), I don't think we're doing our job for this community. There are a great deal of people on the lower scale of salaries

"I have to support the motion fully," Moore concluded. "If I'm wrong they'll tell me next November and that's fair."

The meeting began with Collier's formal application. He said the previous year's concerns about lack of space could be avoided as long as the Ride could make use of the Community Centre and curling club. The new ball diamond would not be used, renovations to the arena could be worked around, and negotiations were underway to make use of adjoining private land.

"Are we just part of an agenda or does the Ride really want to come back," Moore asked. Council was bitter that the Ride was taken to Peterborough, even though council unanimously endorsed its return to Minden before the deadline.

Organizers are "sorry they left Minden," Collier said. With council's "indecision" over use of the under-repair arena, "we didn't want to run the risk" of getting a negative reply.

"Instead of taking a negative attitude, sitting back and saying maybe it's not good, all the way around things can only get better if everyone worked together," said Nick Fomenko, representing the Minden Kinsmen and Kinette Clubs.

Clubs holding Ride events must donate 15 per cent of proceeds to the Ride and the rest would go to their own causes. Problems could be solved by adequate police protection, VEHICLES DESTROYED: This Dodge Dakota, owned by Scott Doan of Haliburton, was severely damaged after it was stolen from Elstone Motors. A Dodge Ram owned by the dealership was also damaged. No one phoned the police, even though one or both vehicles was driven over the high school playing field during the night.

Late night joy ride leaves two trucks totalled, owners angry

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Someone went for a joy ride last Wednesday night and destroyed two trucks and a field hockey net in the process.

After closing hours, person or persons unknown gained entrance to Elstone Motors by smashing an office window. This person then stole four sets of keys and walked out the front door.

One of the trucks, a red 1989 Dodge Dakota Sport, belonged to Scott Doan, who had brought it in to be serviced. Splattered in mud, a window smashed on one side crushed in, it is now beyond repair.

"I phoned to see if my truck was ready," Doan says of how he learned of the damages. When told the story, "I thought they were trying to sell me a new truck. . . It sort of put you off your morning coffee."

Ironically, Doan owns Total Security, which sells security systems.

As part of the thief's 300 km ride in the Dakota, he/she apparently drove up to the old iron bridge on the Horseshoe Lake Road: one of Doan's friends saw his binder laying on the side of the road the next day.

The thief apparently also had quite a time on the sports field beside the high school. Tire marks dug up the earth and the truck rammed through the field hockey net.

The truck ended up on the Boughner Road, just off the Harburn Road. When the thief left the truck, he took along $1,200-worth of Doan's personal possessions including work clothes, tools and cassettes.

One of the cassettes was found — in the tape machine of the silver 1991 W150 4X4 Ram Dodge also stolen from Elstone's.

"Every panel is dented scratched and bent except for the tailgate," says David Elstone. He thinks the truck is a write-off as well. "It definitely wouldn't have done the truck any good they way they drove them."

More than 170 km was put on this truck until it got a flat tire and was left at the Sir Sandford Fleming College campus.

Elstone's insurance will cover the costs of the Ram Dodge, but Doan's insurance will have to pay for his truck since Elstone's is not responsible for trucks left over night.

The theft of two other sets of keys that night was discovered when people from another dealership arrived to pick up the vehicles.

Elstone's was not the only auto dealership hit recently. Last week, a thief broke into Curry's Auto Body Shop on Highway 121 and stole a used car. Ever polite, after going for a joy ride — smashing a window and putting cigarette burns inside the car in the process — the thief drove it back to Curry's. When workers arrived at eight in the morning, the engine was still warm.

Police are still investigating both incidents.

Volunteers shouldn't pay dues, Home Support told

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Volunteers should not have to pay to become members of the organization they are volunteering for, Haliburton County Home Support Services was told Friday afternoon.

The seniors services agency was holding a "brainstorming" session at the Legion in conjunction with revisions to its constitution. In trying to come up with a definition for "member", it was suggested that a minimal fee be charged.

"Does that mean you can't be a volunteer if you don't pay dues," asked Elva Robinson, a former member of the executive. "Why should you have to pay to volunteer?"

"We need rules for people to feel it's important to belong to us," said Elsie Bursey, a member of the committee overseeing constitutional changes. She and other committee members were concerned that without dues, anyone could show up at meetings and expect to vote. As well, people could bring others not associated with Home Support to stack the deck.

"Are you going to get very many who do that," asked Robinson. "Who would want to do that," asked Alex McLeod.

Hadden Gillespie and McLeod said that since 70 per cent of Home Support's funding comes from the provincial government — money raised through taxes — people would be paying twice if they had to pay dues.

"I thought we were a service organization," Gillespie said.

"How do you establish who can vote — you haven't seen these people since the last annual meeting," said committee member Ev Robertson. "How can you vote if you never show up?"

"If you didn't care, you wouldn't be there in the first place," said Robinson. "We don't want to discourage people from voting. We know that for the five or six years

I've been involved, we didn't get people breaking the doors down to attend meetings."

"They should be having to participate" in Home Support matters, said Robertson. But then there is the problem of determining what "participation" entails. The word was changed to members should be "active" in the organization.

Robinson and others suggested having a registration instead of fees. This way, everyone could be recorded and accounted for. Eventually, it was agreed that people would have to register one month before a meeting to be eligible to vote. In an informal poll, eight people voted for registration and no fees, and six people voted against. (Robertson was in favour of the first option because she said it achieved the same goal.) Approximately six other people in the room didn't vote.

Other criteria for membership which seemed to be agreed upon were: permanent or seasonal residents in Haliburton County and Dorset and Kinnmount who are: 55 from recreational commercial (C2), to shoreline residential (SR2-5). The same type of re-zoning is in the works for the Hawk Lake development.

"It is a sensitive environmental area," said Peter Deller. By getting rid of the commercial status the whole area was "begging for more development".

In a copy of a letter addressed to both council and the Ontario Municipal Board, Deller said that the area was "ecologically sensitive" and "already over-extended due to development", and that more development will "totally ruin it."

During his discussion with council a discrepancy was raised as to the actual location of his concern. Council felt Deller was not just concerned with the "de-zoning" of the three properties, but with the whole development.

Since the public meeting was held to discuss re-zoning of only the three properties, council said Deller should have attended one of the previous public meetings on the project. Council also suggested that he attend any future meetings that will deal with it.

municipality's insurance.

The insurance company's legal counsel is still investigating the flood's cause, Maureen Cowen said in a telephone interview.

"Until they have the opportunity to assess the situation, there's very little I can say about the matter," she said. She was unable to say when its report would be ready.

Correction

Contrary to a statement in last week's Editorial, Dysart Reeve Bill Davis did not have a tape recorder in his pocket during a roads committee meeting. The tape recorder was on another table.

Mitch Kennedy does not own the land adjacent to the old Eagle Lake dump. It is owned by Tom and Kim Britton of Eagle Lake.

And Doug White's first name was improperly identified in the septic pit story.

The Echo apologizes for any inconveniences these may have caused.

Ride for Sight is 'good for economy'

'If you look at tourism statistics, it would at least help businesses'

Fomenko added. When Maher asked "What negative attitude have you seen?" Fomenko said he was not alluding to council's past actions. As to what he considers adequate police protection, he could not give specific numbers.

"For economic reasons it would be beneficial to the area," said Lynn Stevens, speaking on behalf of the Red Umbrella Inn and the Chamber of Commerce, of which she's president.

"If you look at tourism statistics and what's happening with economy, it would at least help businesses temporarily," said Chamber Manager Robyn Jarvis. Councillor Lewis Stevens asked if the Chamber would be willing to host the Ride. Jarvis said "I'm sure committees can be formed; we'd be more than willing to help."

Maher asked if Stevens and Jarvis were speaking on behalf of the entire county. When Jarvis said yes, Minden businessman Jerry Jordan asked if businesses were polled.

"We generally go from word of mouth," Jarvis said. "Nothing but good things have been said about the ride."

"Dysart didn't think so," said Maher, referring to its decision not to host the event partly because of concerns for Glebe Park neighbours. Stanhope's reeve, Harry Davis, said at county council that everyone was in favour of the Ride but "not in my backyard."

"Stanhope has no place of the right size," Moore added.

Resident Mary Anne Wilson said "If the Ride returns, I'll get no direct financial gain. But some of the businesses I can enjoy year 'round may not exist if they were to depend on local dollars alone. . . Any small inconveniences (for me) are outweighed by the benefits this worthwhile cause brings to my village."

Gord Monk said his funeral business is hurt by the Ride because of the noise, traffic and motorcyclists parking on his private lot. "There's an element (among the riders) who have little respect for the properties of others."

Granted, he said, all damages to his property were reimbursed by organizers, but he didn't think public funds should be used to host the event. He was also concerned the crowd could not be contained and there is insufficient policing.

After hosting the Ride last year, Peterborough imposed a limit of 5,000 people. "I feel Minden has not choice than to set some limits as well. . . If hosted in a different way, it would not polarize people. I cannot agree that parties have the right for vandalism and infringing on the rights of others."

The Kinmount Fair and Bobcaygeon fiddle contest attract thousands of people but organizers there don't allow the problems to occur, Monk added.

Berry provided a breakdown of costs to the municipality: parks staff setting up the fairgrounds, $1,600; cleaning it up, $960; rental of portable toilets, $2,070; and the shuttle bus, $102.

Moore told Monk that any time Monk had a problem, organizers seemed to be right there to help. As well, the police performance riding troupe, the Golden Helmets, would be in Minden. "If duty were to call, they'd be there." (Maher, a retired OPP officer, doubted the Golden Helmets would do much policing. They do not go to the fairgrounds.)

"I think we have quite a contingent of police for this kind of event," Moore told Monk. "I appreciate your situation but there's a very good return and it's an overall benefit to the community."

In excess of $200,000 is raised by local clubs who hold events in conjunction with the Ride, Moore said.

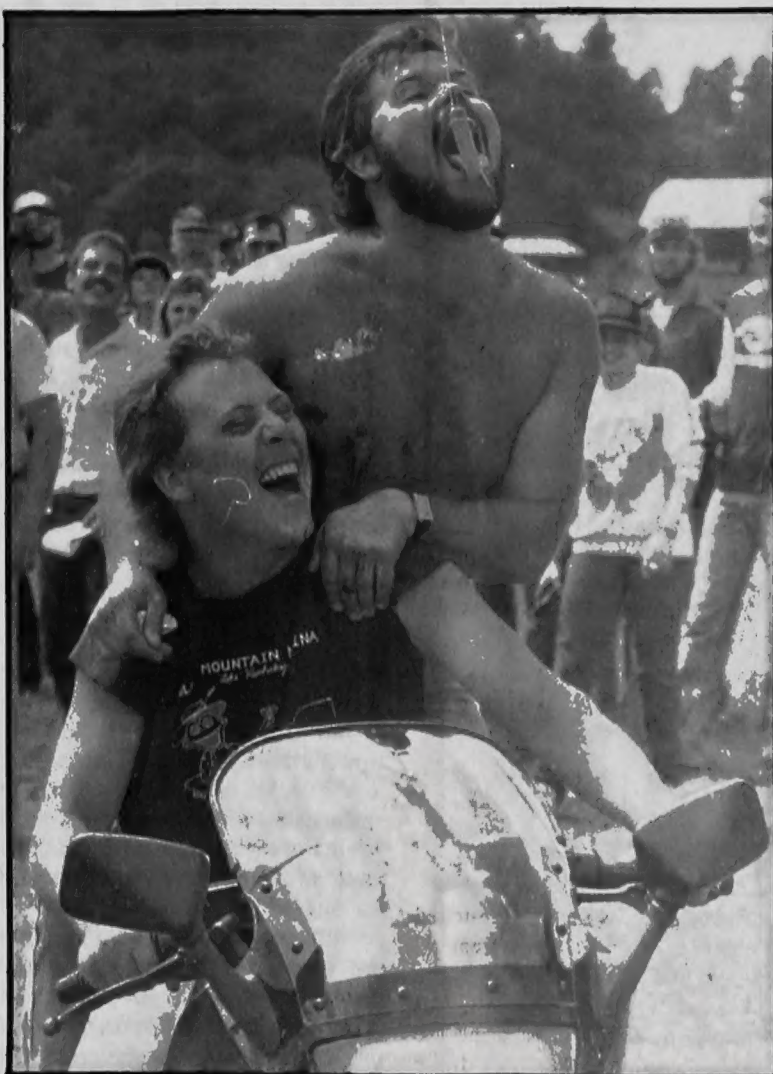

When Moore said "Four years ago I thought it was a horrible thing," Monk responded "I thought it was a great thing then."

Moore added that seniors who live in the area did not complain to him about the noise. "They think it's fun — they know they're alive."

"Maybe we can make some changes to improve it," Monk said.

There seemed to be some misunderstanding about why the Ride was leaving Peterborough, Collier said. The Ride conflicted with events at the university. Peterborough offered to host the Ride at three separate sites but this was unacceptable. As well, no charges were laid at the police's RIDE program, Collier said.

"We went to Peterborough with the idea it would be Utopia and it wasn't," he added.

Organizers have 80 people volunteering for security duty during the weekend, Collier said, to which Jordan replied "That's not enough."

"Have you considered limiting the alcohol — to none," asked Sisson. Collier said no. At the Dysart council meeting, a representative said it would be impossible not to allow drinking.

"If there are any problems, maybe a compromise should be reached," said Michael Homestead, owner of the Schnitzel House. During previous Rides, "I'm busy like crazy" and like all other businesses, "I need the money."

"We should look at positive aspects and make the damn thing work," Homestead concluded. "We should do everything we can to keep things going."

"I do appreciate there are problems but on the whole, the Ride will benefit the area," said Ann Barker, who owns land in the municipality. As Stanhope's deputy-reeve, she's also county council's representative on the Chamber of Commerce and has spoken in favour of the Ride.

"We don't make money ourselves but it goes around," Barker said. "It brings employment. It was a very hard summer and that money gives businesses a little bit of a start."

As well, participants buy tickets from the various service clubs and that money goes back into the community.

"As a business person, I have mixed feelings," Jordan, owner of Highlands Jeweller, said when he was allowed to speak. (See accompanying story.) His store does not benefit, but he recognizes others' do.

Jordan was "irked" when the Ride pulled out in 1989, even after council's unanimous support. "Mr. Collier, you got in a huff and walked out of here" and portrayed Monk as "the heavy" because he spoke out against the Ride.

(Maher said Collier was on television saying Minden was too small, even though the Ride "had been courted by Peterborough before our vote.")

But it's as a resident who lives near the community centre that Jordan had his strongest words. "When

Ride debate sparks one on free speech

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Although the main discussion was about Ride for Sight's merits, last Thursday's Minden council meeting also turned into a debate on who has the right to speak at such gatherings.

More than 50 people crammed into the council chambers, although only six people were listed as delegations. Reeve Ray Moore seemed to think everyone would want the opportunity to speak so he said only people who had called the municipal office that morning would be heard. (It turns out roughly a third of the people were there about a proposed Stanworth seniors complex.)

The following debate was interspersed among the conversation about the Ride.

Occasionally, the speaker's presentation drew comments and audible reactions from the floor.

"We will have no further outbursts," Moore said. "We cannot allow an open debate."

Businessman Jerry Jordan, who wasn't listed as a delegation, asked why a special meeting wasn't then called to deal specifically with the Ride. "I'm not for or against it yet but I have 100 questions," Jordan said. He didn't think comments should be cut off.

"This is a council meeting we're trying to conduct in an orderly manner," Moore replied.

Deputy-reeve Bern Berry said Jordan had phoned him Tuesday saying he'd like to speak at the meeting. Berry assured him it would be possible. Later, to avoid confusion, the office asked interested parties to phone Thursday morning to get their name put on the delegations' list.

"I'm sure that Ray Moore is a very amiable fellow and he'd allow

Councillors say meetings are for public anyone to speak," Berry said. "If it was an open meeting, I'd say yes," Moore stressed, saying it was a council meeting.

"What was the point of people coming here if you won't allow them to speak," asked Councillor Bob Sisson.

"The people who wish to speak have got on the agenda," Moore said.

"All council meetings are public meetings — it is not a closed session," said former councillor Verne Graham, who wasn't on the agenda but wished to speak on the Ride.

"We'll be here till three this afternoon" if everyone who wants to speak may, said Moore, eliciting "So be it" from Jordan.

The debate about the Ride then resumed. But not for long.

In explaining his voting history, Councillor Mike Maher added "I was surprised this is not an open council meeting." One of the speakers added another thought on the Ride and then Berry said "You can't deal with something if you're going to restrict people from voicing their opinion."

"Otherwise I won't have all the facts and will not be able to vote for (the Ride)."

"We cannot allow (everyone to speak)," Moore repeated. "If this was an open meeting when we're here to discuss Ride for Sight alone and it wasn't a council meeting" he'd have no qualms with it.

There was another delegation and then Berry repeated "If we're not allowed to weigh the pros and cons, I'll vote it down."

Clerk-treasurer Mary Mysyk asked to be allowed to speak. Because Jordan expressed interest earlier, but did not phone that morning, she felt he should have been on the agenda. Berry agreed.

"Deputations are the way (to run a meeting)," Moore said. "If you don't understand that by now, Bern, that's the proper protocol."

Jordan was then allowed to share his opinions, followed by Graham. When no one else expressed interest to speak, council retired to another room to make its decision on the Ride.

DISCUSSING THE ISSUES: Stuart Baker addressed Victoria Street School's accommodation problems at a Home and School meeting.

"We have to have some rules, some curfews. It's not fair that my family has to go through that. We have our rights, just like everyone else. . . I'd really like to see them clean up their act."

"We have created a police-free zone for Ride for Sight," said resident Verne Graham, who has attended all Minden Rides. The OPP will not go on the site and organizers are "a little lenient in many responsibilities."

One of the fundraising methods Collier mentioned was collecting beer cans after the Ride, often netting collectors $700. Boy Scouts used to do this in Minden but Graham said this had to be discontinued because drug paraphernalia and syringes were found "all over the place and they are not diabetics coming up."

One bad accident involving the Boy Scouts would cause great repercussions which have to be avoided at all costs, Graham said.

"These things have to be addressed," he added. "I don't think liquor and drugs have to be allowed in."

Graham noted that this year's Studio Tour, which receives no municipal funding, generated $100,000 in sales.

"They void in your front lawn; they defecate in your back lawn and the OPP has done a good job" in avoiding the whole problem, said community centre neighbour Gord Samells of his benefits from the Ride.

Collier denied it was a "police-free zone", saying that in Peterborough 14 police were on duty. At Dysart's meeting about the Ride, OPP Staff Sergeant Bill Elliott said the police would not be patrolling the Ride site. There are only 26 officers with the Minden detachment.

There's no quick remedy for Victoria Street woes

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Solving the school accommodation problem in Haliburton won't be easy, the Home and School Association was told last Wednesday night.

Director of Education Stuart Baker brought the parents' group up to date on Victoria Street School's classroom crunch.

Baker zeroed in on the board's attempt to get capital funds from the ministry. "To shout and stamp your feet doesn't get you anywhere with politicians," he said of the difficult task.

The board intends to remind MPP Dennis Drainville of the campaign promises he made during the election for more funding for education. The board had built up a positive relationship with the former minister of education, Sean Conway, and will seek his help in lobbying more money.

"We want to build on the fact that the county has not received a major allocation from the government in years," Baker said. Construction of the J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School in the early 1970s was the last time the board has received a major building allocation.

Haliburton County has already received its entire allocation from the ministry for 1990, '91 and '92, which means a 1993 starting date for any proposed building projects.

However, Baker said that when the 1993 allocation comes in, the needs of the Archie Stouffer Elementary School would have to be met first. Overcrowding in Minden is the board's number one priority. At least half of Archie Stouffer students attend class in portables while others must attend school at the old IGA building downtown.

The only feasible solution to the accommodation problems at Archie Stouffer and Victoria Street is to construct two additions. At Archie Stouffer, 10 new classrooms would have to be added, along with more gym facilities. In Haliburton, a new addition of 12 classrooms would be added on to J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School to house the students of the Victoria Street School.

But this idea was not greeted with great enthusiasm by parents at the meeting, who were concerned that the special teaching environment at Victoria Street would be lost if the school was to become part of JDHES. They worry the design of the proposed addition would be far too institutional. "Would it just be another long hallway?" asked one parent, referring to the widely-disliked JDHES design.

Baker assured the group that both staff and parents can contribute ideas tional needs of both towns would be met," she said.

When this point was raised at the meeting, trustee Tim Casey said building two additions rather than a new school would save taxpayers at least $1-million. Baker added that when a new school is built it costs at least $1-million to have a gym built, and every school must have a gym.

But Baker also said that even if a new school was constructed, two additions would still have to be added at Archie Stouffer and JDHES to handle the influx of kindergarten students. Baker said that beginning

"Primary teachers want to be involved in the design of a new school because the architect is just too far removed from the situation," says the Home and School president. "Would it just be another long highway?" a parent asked.

on how to improve the design of the addition while the plans are being drawn up.

This assurance came as good news for Home and School President Dianne Hagerman.

"Primary teachers want to be involved in the design of the plans because the architect is just too far removed from the situation", she said in an interview after the meeting.

Hagerman added that worrying about how the proposed addition's layout is premature, at least not until the funding is available. She does not see this happening in 1993.

"Getting enough money for both the schools seems unrealistic."

Many parents, herself included, would rather see a brand new school built midway between Minden and Haliburton. "That way the educain 1994, the government has deemed that every elementary school must have space for a junior kindergarten level.

"They have placed the day care situation into the schools' laps," said Baker.

However, Hagerman still cannot understand why the board is bent on building a new addition on to JDHES, when she said studies have proven that students function better in schools with a population between 300 to 500 students. Attaching Victoria Street School onto JDHES will raise the population to more than 700 students. "Educationally this does not seem like a very good choice."

"All we can do is what we think is right for the kids," said Casey, "but we are restricted by money and politics. But I think we do a good job here."

Sleepless nights for an army mom

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

FOR MOST OF US the crisis in the Persian Gulf is thousands of miles away. But for one Haliburton mom the unrest in the gulf is much closer to home — closer than she would like it to be.

It has been several weeks since that special delivery letter arrived for Gloria Bird from her daughter-in-law in Germany. She read the news with mixed emotions: her son, Corporal Frank Bird, had been transferred to Saudi Arabia on October 4th. "I knew before I got Julia's letter that Frank was going," she said. "I had seen it on the news that (Prime Minister Brian) Mulroney had ordered the F18s into the gulf."

Cpl. Bird, a member of the Canadian Armed Forces for five years, is a field engineer. It is his duty to help set up camps in the desert and to perform rapid runway repair so the F18s have a place to land.

"I was so glad that Julia sent a letter," his mother said at her comfortable Haliburton home. "It would have been too much of a hassle on the phone. I would have got too upset."

But Mrs. Bird said her son promised her that he would be alright. "He told me not to worry, that they are 'well trained'."

Regardless of Frank's reassurances, Mrs. Bird admits that she is very fearful of her son's safety and has had trouble sleeping. "I woke up in the middle of the night and wondered where he is, what is he thinking."

While stationed in the gulf, Cpl. Bird has had letter contact only with his wife of one year, who passes any news on to the rest of the family. This restriction has not made it any easier on Mrs. Bird.

"I'm a chronic worrier," she laughs, adding that she has been worried about her son ever since he went overseas four years ago.

"I know in my heart that he will come back safe," she said. "I have been praying and I know God's looking after him."

Cpl. Bird is scheduled to have a nine-day leave for Christmas and will celebrate his 24th birthday on December 28th. His mother said that all his life, Frank has complained about missing out on a big birthday party because his fell so close to Christmas. But there will be no excuse for complaints this year.

"When he comes home, we are going to have a party," his mother says.

At this point, Mrs. Bird has her fingers crossed that everything will work out for the holidays. Yet she's still wary. "With the army you never know. Frank always says it is 'hurry up and wait'."

Dysart wants sewage plant expanded

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Dysart council wants to expand Haliburton's sewage treatment plant even if the proposed sewer line extension does not proceed.

At a special meeting called by Reeve Bill Davis on September 20, council agreed that Totten Sims Hubicki shall proceed with the expansion's re-designing. This is needed to meet "the future needs of Haliburton" village, the minutes say.

"This undertaking is based on the assumption that no expansion capacity for the (Lake Kashagawigamog) resorts can proceed at this time," say the minutes.

As well, if an assimilation study is needed, it shall proceed under the MOE's Terms of Reference.

Plans for the sewer expansion/extension seemed stalled when the resort owners on the north shore of Kashagawigamog would not agree to MOE stipulations. At the last moment, the MOE said only existing units could be hooked onto a proposed sewer line linking them to the treatment plant. Since this curtailed expansion as a means of generating their share of the costs, resort owners felt this was unacceptable.

Many would not sign an agreement with the municipality.

The municipality has not yet heard the MOE's response to the resort owners' demands to allow expansion immediately.

However, the village is almost at sewage capacity and very little development can take place unless the treatment plant is upgraded and expanded.

To receive funding, council needed to make a decision on whether to proceed with plant expansion before September 30, which is why the special meeting was called.

Dump can't be sold for years

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

After all the debate at last Tuesday's Dysart council meeting, it turns out the municipality couldn't sell the old Eagle Lake dump if it wanted to.

The Ministry of the Environment says a dump site must remain untouched for 25 years before it can be developed in any way.

Mitch Kennedy of Eagle Lake had wanted to buy the land for a business venture. When councillor Brian Watts asked council to sell the land to Kennedy without it going to tender, the rest of council said the tender process must be followed. The land was advertised for sale.

However, the former dump has only been dormant for a dozen years. Council must wait another 13 years before any proposals can even be considered.

Promote & protect

Minden and Haliburton businesses are justified in saying something is needed to boost sales in June. Children are still in school and until July 1, parents are not ready to begin holidays in earnest. The May 24th weekend is a good drawing card, but a special event is needed to encourage people to travel north for a weekend. No one denies these businesses are vital to the lifeblood of the community, and that their interests should be kept in mind when decisions are being made. If economic forecasts are correct, this winter promises to be a long one and a little something extra would be appreciated.

But Ride for Sight is not necessarily the answer. It's a short-term boost that favours certain businesses — there's not much room on a motorcycle where you can put your purchases — and does not enhance a village's image as a tourist destination. Dollars are spent here, that's true, yet the costs to the community are mounting. Trouble follows when an event becomes known primarily as an excuse to get drunk. Such alcohol-induced shenanigans — no one is against drinking in moderation — turn others away. Can Minden and Haliburton, or any community in the county, afford having something go wrong?

Not all motorcyclists on the Ride condone improper behaviour. They're the ones who deposit their money and then leave the village boundaries to stay overnight at a resort or campground. It's the ones who stay who are the problem, even amongst themselves. At one Ride in Minden a few years ago, there were definitely two camps — and one was terrified to visit with the other. As one citizen said at Thursday's Minden council meeting, Boy Scouts are no longer allowed to pick up the empty beer cans because of the discarded drug paraphernalia and used syringes they're also bound to find. Yet an organizer who made the sales pitch at Dysart's council meeting said the solution was to pray for warm weather — participants will drink more and pass out faster.

When some people suggested restricting the consumption of alcohol, organizers responded in near horror. The overnight party is the riders' way of congratulating themselves for raising $500,000 for eye disease research, they said. If not allowed to drink, the riders wouldn't participate. What happened to the altruism and the noble cause?

If not Ride for Sight, then what? Well, first of all the Highlands must recognize we have things to offer that others don't. In the winter, it's plenty of snow and lots to do to take advantage of it. In the summer, we have clean — for now — lakes surrounded by lush green forests; we have the peace and serenity such beauty has to offer; and we have the talented and dedicated people who know how to make an event successful. Our size and location are not handicaps. A tiny town named Blyth has a summer theatre festival which attracts thousands as it builds a solid reputation. A much larger town, but much farther north, is Parry Sound. Its Festival of the Sound attracts musicians from around the world and is recorded by the CBC. You can't afford to buy that sort of free advertising.

Looking at local events, the most successful ones are those which were generated by local people who had an idea and worked hard to bring it to fruition. There's nothing as exhilarating to watch as the dog sleds racing out of Minden on a wintery day. Dependent on the volunteers who work year-round, it creates a picturesque and positive image of Minden. The Studio Tour in its own quiet way generated $100,000 in sales for local artisans, not to mention the thousands of dollars which were spent at accommodations, restaurants and stores. That was the brainchild of one woman and because it fits in so perfectly with the Highlands' strengths, each year brings more prosperity. The Bluegrass Festival keeps growing every year and although there were problems this year — caused by excessive drinking — the organizers live here and are working to avoid such problems in the future. Highland Games organizers have a good idea but rely heavily on the weather's co-operation.

It's not money for money's sake we want in the Highlands. It's prosperity from recognizing a good thing and wanting to improve, and protect, it. M.P.

Forestry practices criticized

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

I have just returned to Haliburton County after spending a summer working with a reforestation company in the world's largest clearcut, one of humankind's few manifestations visible from outer space, near Bowron Lake, British Columbia. While my status as a free planter in no way grants me the wisdom of Peter Hynard or R.D. Lawrence, (Two Views on Clear-cutting, October 3), I have viewed the effects of clearcutting first hand and feel I have a unique perspective.

While in many areas of this clear cut the already-replanted trees had taken root (in only ideal conditions), and looked like they may yield a stand of (inferior) timber after a generation or more of growing, mostly the nature of this travesty was clear: kilometre after kilometre scraped down to mineral soil, the nutrient layer eroded away by water and gravity. A perfect prescription for a desert.

Through the ages and around the world there are countless examples of poor forest management which result inevitably in the same thing: soil erosion, loss of nutrients and ultimately desertification. So I must ask the simple question — why on earth would we in Haliburton County want to mimic the system? Is it appropriate to irreversibly change the ecology of our landscape for the purpose of blithely feeding our insatiable need for forest products? It is obvious that the replanted forest (plantation) does not have the degree of biodiverse integrity that an original forest has. Can't we be truly "resource-full" and move towards a more sensitive, sustainable method of extracting and replacing that which we feel we need from the forests of Canada? Just as there are examples of poor forest practices, there are also working examples of good, so let's examine them all before we are very sorry for what we have done to our home.

Clear-cutting irresponsible

To the Editor:

Missing the forest for the trees.

I'd like to comment on the Oct. 3 article, "Two views on clear-cutting," a discussion between naturalist and author R.D. Lawrence and Peter Hynard of the M.N.R. I share Mr. Lawrence's concerns regarding the short-sightedness of clear-cutting, which ignores the interdependence and needs of a broad range of diverse life forms comprising the forest, in order to "harvest" a marketable timber product.

A forest depends upon the quality of its soil, which consists of a myriad of things: plant nutrients and organic matter, sub-soils which supply trees with nutrient and anchorage, various micro-organisms including fungi, bacteria, bugs and aerators — a delicate, dynamic balance which has taken years to evolve, is mechanically obliterated by clear-cutting, with devastating short-term and long-range consequences.

Decades of scientific research have concentrated on every possible cause of forest productivity decline except that it might be the direct result of intensive plantation management based on ignorance of forest processes. It seems to me that it's time we smelled the coffee and woke up to the internationally well-known fact that clear-cutting, whether it's done in areas of high value for recreational use, right next to cottages, or in areas sufficiently obscured from sight, is ethically deficient, economically irresponsible, environmentally suicidal, fundamentally wrong and quite simply, does NOT work.

Sustainable, restorative forestry, incorporating selective, sensitive logging methods, had demonstrated itself to be a working, sensible prototype worthy of emulation, an approach that is based not only on dollars, but on good sense.

FEIR PLAY

CREIGHTON FEIR

Creighton Feir is on holidays, so this week's Feir Play is written by Martha Perkins and Len Pizzey.

HALIBURTON/VICTORIA'S MPP, Dennis Drainville, received a few kudos on the editorial page of The Ottawa Citizen. The newly-elected New Democrat, who is also an Anglican priest, opened the provincial government's swearing-in ceremonies at University of Toronto a few weeks ago. In a Letter to the Editor, Ottawa's Sunitar Singh writes that Drainville "offered prayer for politicians, workers, families — in fact for all humanity. He said that the Ontario of today is composed of many religious groups and it is desirable that they should be specifically identified on this august occasion. He then invited Sikh, Muslim, Jew, Catholic, Protestant and Hindu representatives to come forward. I think it was the first time that religious groups were recognized at the swearing-in ceremony of a provincial government in Canada." Our thanks to Mary Hannah of Haliburton for pointing that out to us.

In a story about Branch 1129 of the Royal Canadian Army Cadets a few weeks ago, Mention was made of civilian officer Kent Miller. He had signed up with the cadets when it first started four years ago but had to resign when he turned 18. Kent said he joined cadets because he wanted a career in the army and it seems he'll get his wish. Last week, he was accepted into the Royal Canadian Regiment. He was sworn in yesterday and will soon begin courses at Cornwallis, Nova Scotia. Kent is the son of Jane and John Miller of Haliburton.

Haliburton's Rotary Club may not have any high profile public projects underway at the moment, but it continues to put the money it raises to good use in the community. At a recent meeting, the club agreed to donate $10,000 toward the cost of new kitchen facilities at the YMCA Camp Wanakita at Koshlong Lake. The camp is an important resource for local young people — many of whom have gained a new understanding of nature through the Sunship Earth programme. The area is fortunate to have Wanakita and its energetic staff in its midst.

You don't have to be an economist or a political pundit to sense that Canadians are more frustrated, worried and depressed about the nation's state of affairs than they have been for many years. All you have to do is strike up a conversation with any local business person. Michael Wilson may be unaware that the economy is in recession, but he's practically alone in his ignorance. Everyone else believes Canada is facing the toughest winter since the height of the previous recession in 1982. Then, as now, much of the damage was the result of economic vandalism — of policies made by politicians whose thinking is rooted in the economic models of the past. Depressingly, there is little sign that Michael Wilson and Bank of Canada governor John Crow are prepared to stop their high interest rate assault on the economy very far short of widespread destruction. The human cost of their anti-inflation campaign is high. While few local businesses have been pushed to the brink of ruin as yet, many people are living daily with a sense of fear — fear that the businesses they have worked long and hard to build up will be destroyed by factors they cannot control, fear that they may have to lay off employees if the downturn continues to deepen. Compounding this fear is the looming chaos of the great Canadian ripoff, the Government Sponsored Theft. The impact of this tax grab on consumer spending will be frightening. The retail sector is already being hurt by consumer uncertainty. It is widely anticipated that the GST will dampen consumer enthusiasm even more for at least the first two quarters of 1991. Added to this is the frustration businesses feel at being forced to collect this most unpopular tax from their customers. The tax is an administrative nightmare for many businesses, and two months before its scheduled imposition, it is not very well understood. Even financial publications which support the principal of the GST are urging the Tories not to impose it so hastily, and with so little understanding of its consequences. Supporters of a consumption tax say the rate should be lower, it should be applied to all goods and services to simplify administration, and it should be blended with provincial tax, so that there is only one level of taxation, as there is in every other country that has a GST or Value Added Tax.

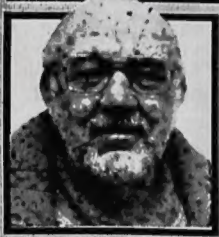

Recently, a Revenue Canada official contacted The Echo to talk about the GST. He wanted to know the company's gross revenue and cost of sales. Why? So he could make a rough calculation of the GST we'll have to remit. Did this mean that Michael Wilson really didn't have any idea of how much money he will steal from consumers through the GST, even though he has claimed it is revenue neutral? Well, yes, the tax official admitted, the government really doesn't know how big its take will be. Is it any wonder that consumers are wary and small business owners are living with a knot of fear in their stomachs?

Canadians don't need Liberal senators to put a stop to the GST. All they need is the collective courage to reject the tax.

POINTS OF VIEW

His bad side shocks him

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

I AM ALWAYS SHOCKED when I realize that I have done a hurtful thing. It is a shock because I think of myself as such a good person! My first response when someone declares that I have hurt them is to deny that I should do such a thing. They must have misunderstood me! If they really knew me, my good intentions, my mellow heart, they would not have been angry or hurt. I'm a good guy, see? To know me is to love me!

When the truth is pressed upon me that I have been both thoughtless and insensitive and good folks have been hurt, then I don't know what to do. I usually try on a lot of scenarios that will take away people's anger toward me. Make them feel sorry, elicit pity by limping around emotionally are favourites. As my confusion about what to do mounts, I go through the "I-don't-care-that's-public-life" syndrome: Shrug the shoulders and get back to work. That doesn't work for too long so then I get mad.

It's funny how quickly ideas and arguments flow to an angry mind. I can batter back fast and furiously — adding unnecessary fuel to fire, of course.

Thus the uncertainty prevails. Confusion persists. I do begin to learn some things. One is, just saying you're sorry may be a good starting point, but that doesn't really do the job. Forgiveness comes with a higher price than that when you have really made folks mad.

Some friends comfort by saying, "oh, you just were not yourself." But I know that that is the problem, I was myself and will be that self again. I am facing the full fact of who I am.

That's the struggle with forgiveness, remembering who you are and knowing that a whole lot of other people know the truth about you too. It's now up to them what they're going to do about you. It is out of your control. It's about at this stage that I laugh and cry the 101st Psalm:

"I have become like a pelican in the wilderness,
Like an owl in desolate places.
I lie awake and I moan like some lonely bird on a roof-top.

All day long my foes revile me,
Those who hate me use my name as a curse.
In your anger, Lord, and your fury
You have lifted me up and thrown me down.

Other people's anger toward me, when justified, is a word from the Lord. It is the Lord's anger and fury too. Like the Psalmist says, it is like being "lifted up and thrown down" by God himself.

I can usually take that and the wounds begin to heal, because the Lord's fury and anger is for my sake: to be brought down is to know again who you are in the impatient love of the Lord. I don't deny that I am a fool, for the Lord will take my hand and help me get to my feet again and again. And sometimes the Lord brings me very close to my enemies. This way, since I learn that they, like me, think they are good guys, too and to truly know them is to love them, actually, to truly know them, is to love them.

Snowbirds and Flamingos

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

HAL COULD HARDLY WAIT. He had been running around all week, getting the van ready, finishing up last minute jobs around the cottage, things he didn't want to leave until next spring. His wife Myrna had been equally busy, cleaning out closets, feeding Hal odds and ends to clear out the frig and freezer. She didn't know whether to get a perm now or wait until they arrived south. It was hard to find time for the hairdresser with so much to do before they left.

It has been a cold fall. The wind and rain seemed to be pushing them to leave earlier this year but they wouldn't deviate from their yearly schedule. Despite the weather, they both loved their place by the lake and always left with mixed feelings. In order to enjoy the warmth of sunny days, palm trees by the pool and the camaraderie of other seniors in the park, Hal and Myrna also had to bid farewell to their family. Creature comforts were wonderful but Christmas without children and grandchildren would never be the same.

"I wonder what changes we'll find in the park this year, Myrna," Hal mused, as he rearranged some boxes for the upteenth time. He didn't want to bring too much down with them because they always returned with at least twice as much.

"The Blacks probably won't be there. Since he had that stroke this summer, everything's different for them now," Myrna gazed out over the lake as she sipped her tea. "Thank goodness we're OK, Hal," she continued. "Much as I like it here, I wouldn't want to face the long cold months." Silently she added, "Especially if it was by myself."

Mike was getting impatient as well. Now that almost all the leaves were off the trees and the weather had changed from balmy fall to blustery near-winter, he wanted to see some white stuff. He and Lois really enjoyed the winter and that was one of the reasons they had retired to the lake. "If we were still in the city, what would we be doing?" he asked. "We'd be indoors most of the time — probably in a little apartment watching TV. That's living? No thank you, not for us!"

"We're busier now than we have ever been," Lois said as she slapped another coat of paint on Mike's latest carpentry project. "We get together with the others for cards, crafts, fishing, hiking — and that's in a slow week," she laughed. "Wait until winter, then we'll really have a ball with our snowmobiles." Mike and Lois were far enough away from their families so as not to get stuck babysitting very often. But they were still close enough for birthdays and holidays. The winter was less hectic in terms of visitors, but more active in doing what they liked best — being outside. And it looked as though Lois would end up as president of their senior's association that year. She already had plenty of plans and Mike was urging her to take on the job.

"Hear that?" Stan asked, cocking his head to the side. The only sound was the gently lap of waves on the shore. Stan smiled. "That's why I'm here. And that's why this is the best time of the year. You can have the summer with all the people and noisy boats. I prefer the quiet."

"It took some getting used to at first," his wife Doris piped in. "Not the quiet. But the working summers when all our city friends and family were here on vacation. It kind of felt like we were out of sync with the rest of the world. They'd be sitting on the dock sunning themselves or out in the boat while we worked away in the store. 'How can you stand it?' they'd ask."

"But that's only two months out of the year. The rest of the time, especially in the winter, our time's our own," said Stan. "We only open on the weekends. So if we feel like taking off to ice fish in the middle of the week, we can."

"I got my revenge on those summer vacationers too," laughed Doris. "Last year I phoned my sister down in Toronto. It was eleven o'clock in the morning. It had just snowed the night before and Stan and I were all dressed to go skiing across the lake. My sister works in one of those fancy new high-rises downtown. When she answered the phone, I asked her what she was doing. She said, 'Working of course.' Then I told her Stan and I were about to take off for a few hours of skiing. 'Boy are you lucky' was her reply. So I told her to remember that next summer when she started to ask me how I could bear to work. And we won't be swatting any mosquitoes out there on the ski trail, either."

The van was finally loaded. Hal had drained the water pipes and at the last minute Myrna had managed to fit in an appointment at the hairdresser's. She really hadn't wanted to drive all the way down to Florida looking like a fright, as she had told Hal. She climbed in beside him and he drove down the driveway headed for the open road. It would take almost a week to reach their destination because they liked to take their time and stop along the way. Myrna turned her head for one last look until the spring. "It's too bad winter couldn't end right after the New Year, Hal," she said. "I really hate leaving this place."

"Just think of the head start on your summer tan you'll be getting Myrna," he joked. "Besides, maybe this year we'll splurge and come back for a week at Christmas. I guarantee you a week will be just enough of winter."

"I suppose," she sighed. "Let's do it this year. Then we'll see if we're really snowbirds or flamingoes at heart."

Giuliano is 'too folksy'

To the Editor:

In his column about "the Trust Has Come Back" (The Echo, Oct. 3) Bob Giuliano becomes a political propagandist.

Sentimentality, combined with nostalgia, emotional religious references and "folksy" anecdotes characterize Mr. Giuliano's writing. Now he's become a political analyst as well.

He relates the story of the hypothetical "folksy" couple who find marital harmony now that Ontario has a socialist government. "The mystery and magic of common people in Government" has curbed their animosity.

Because of the election results "folks trust folks. Real people. Our neighbours". Imagine!

And God, who has been apparently imprisoned in church, thanks to the N.D.P. "maybe got out of church for a day and had some fun".

Rainy weather affects us all

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

IT'S BEEN A LONG, depressing stretch of rainy days since Saturday, when the sun last shone. Thank goodness we spent all that bright and windy day digging potatoes and shallots, grinding corn stalks, tilling and planting rye grass. We stayed out, working in the sun until we could barely stand.

I don't know about you, but so very many gloomy days begin to sap my energy, take away the desire to do anything. I find myself crawling into a stack of Agatha Christie's to escape the dreariness. Surely this can't carry on much longer. And yet, another day, I've awoken to the sound of rain.

Even the cats have become disgusted with the weather. They've traded their long, territorial walks for all-day naps, venturing out only for nature's calls. They come in shaking off the wet, with ears pinned back, waiting for me to towel off their soggy fur. Then, they purr some thanks and dive into the food dish. My cats are putting on winter weight. They are eating like a bunch of ravenous bears preparing for a long hibernation. They are visibly gaining weight. And their fur is getting thick.

If the old time signs work anymore, it's going to be a long, hard winter. The onion skins were thick, the caterpillars very furry, and the tomato skins tough. Apparently, the almanac agrees there'll be a lot of snow and cold. The barn is filling up with mice again and they've broken into our burlap bags of wood chips to make their nests. I guess we're going to have to get ourselves another old chest freezer for storage.

If all this weren't depressing enough . . . last night, right in the middle of Hercule Poirot's dissection of the ABC Murders, Ed and I both sniffed, and said, "Eck, Skunk!"

My first thought was, "Have we left a door open?"

Ed's first action was to look out the front door, and let in the abominable snowcat, who had obviously just run headlong into a cousin of Pepe La Pew.

"Ginnie," he asks, while holding the sputtering, squinting beast down by the scruff of the neck. "Does this cat smell like a skunk?" Aren't men marvelous?

At that point, I thought, "Thank God I'm not expecting a visit from the editor of House Beautiful."

I mean . . . the damage had been done. So I talked to Dr. Brown, who advised me to bath the cat's eyes (and wished me luck), opened the window in the bathroom I'd just spent the morning housecleaning and put the disgusting, embarrassed cat in the tub.

A few minutes later, I decided that bathing his eyes was definitely not enough. And we brought out the industrial size can of tomato juice.

The slightly pink cat was put in the cellar for the night. I soaked my clothes and towels in vinegar and washing soda. Ed put extra wood in the furnace and a couple of windows were left open. It didn't help.

I woke up this morning in the middle of dreaming that this really cute, smiling, black and white, cartoon-like beast had rounded up all the animals into a pen and was surrounding them with a visible cloud of fumes. When I opened my eyes, there was Yeti . . . stretching and yawning, right next to me.

Like I said . . . Aren't men marvelous.

At home — but on the road

A COUPLE OF WEEKS AGO, I looked back a bit over the five years of columns in The Echo and also looked ahead to this year. and the fact that some of them would be coming to you from "on the road."

At that time, I explained that an annoying arm and shoulder injury (one I got playing 'tug' with my dog, believe it or not), has removed me from the back of my snowmobile — and the winter scene here generally — at least for a while.

I referred to the fact that we would be traveling in our mini-motorhome and mixing in a few items from on the road with our regular topics. I think it might be worthwhile to explain how I hope to do it — and to give you an idea of how we're traveling.

The first thing I guess I should make perfectly clear is that our mini-motor home is just that. It's not one of those two-bedroom, four-piece-bath monster Winnebagos or converted buses that weigh in at eight tons and $160,000.

Let me give you the picture. It's a little fellow, just over 20 feet long, that will fit between the white lines at most parking meters. At seven feet wide, it is about a foot narrower than most motorhomes we see on the road.

The biggies either look like a converted Greyhound bus, or a big, long trailer with big windows in the front. Ours is the type that is known as a 'Class C,' and the motor and cab part of the truck frame it's made on show in front of the cabin part.

There is a part that projects over the truck cab, and that is supposed to be a 50x92 inch bunkbed when the unit sleeps four. We have converted that front part into storage, which means it is only about half that wide—so we can stand up between the seats.

Almost everything we need for a six-month trip will have to fit into this space. (Food and dishes fit into cupboards in the kitchen area and in the fridge). We've kept our notes from our three-month trip last year, and we've had to do a lot of thinking and planning...

Between the two seats, is a space for the dog's bed, and an aisle about 32 inches wide runs through to the back of the unit, where there is a dinette table with seats on each side which will seat four. The table drops down, the cushions spread out, and this turns into a 52x80 inch bed.

There is an entrance door and step behind the passenger's seat, and behind it is a small refrigerator that runs with propane or electricity, and a propane stove. There are 16 inches of counter top before you're back at the dinette again.

There's room for a small microwave on top of the fridge, a fan hood over the stove, and cupboards across the top rest of the way to the back. There is a little more cupboard space under the stove and counter, but it shares it with room underneath for Haliburton high school's girls field hockey team, in white, battled to a 1-1 tie against Lakefield last Thursday. The team also competed in a tournament in Toronto on Saturday, winning two, tying one and losing one to come second in their pool.

Field hockey team's offensive a winner

A tie and a loss last Thursday have left the HHSS girls field hockey team battling for the third and final playoff spot. The outcome will be decided this Thursday when the team travels to Lindsay to meet Norwood.

Haliburton was looking for a win when they hosted Lakefield District high school on Thursday, but they had to settle for a one-all tie. The HHSS girls out-shot Lakefield in the first half, but strong play by the visitors' goalie kept Haliburton from scoring. Early in the second half Lakefield scored on a goal mouth scramble. The deficit spurred Haliburton into a strong attack which paid off when Karen Cooper scored the equalizer in the last minute of play.

Adam Scott Collegiate proved to be tougher opponents as the local girls took to the field for their second game of the day. The visitors were undefeated going into their final league game, and they stayed that way. Haliburton matched Adam Scott's play and mounted an aggressive attack, but were unable to put the ball into the net. Adam Scott were awarded a penalty corner after a dangerous clear by Haliburton's goalie, and they made the most of it, executing the play perfectly and scoring what proved to be the winning goal in a 1-0 game.

On Saturday, the HHSS girls were in Toronto to participate in the Ontario Women's Field Hockey Association School Girls Conference tournament. The exhibition tourney involved some 40 teams in eight pools, with action on six fields. It is intended to give new players a chance to get valuable game experience, and veteran players an opportunity to polish their skills.

The local girls did well, earning two wins and a tie, to only one loss, and finished second in their pool.

In the opening game against Lorne Park from Mississauga, Haliburton's concerted attack resulted in a quick goal by Karen Cooper. The result was never in doubt although HHSS was unable to add to their advantage. Brenda Lavender earned the shutout.

Game two against Stouffville was a close checking contest, with numerous scoring opportunities at both ends. It ended a scoreless draw, with Lavender once again getting the shutout.

In game three, Haliburton met their toughest test, as they took on St. Pius from Ottawa, a team that went undefeated and won the pool. St. Pius scored early and the lead held despite Haliburton's efforts to get an equalizer.

The final game of the day produced a win for the Haliburton girls, as they scored early against Dennis O'Connor secondary school from Oshawa and protected the lead for the rest of the game.

Mudbowl mires Sr. Redmen, Weldon slithers to 26-12 win

Haliburton's senior Redmen dodged lightning bolts and slithered through a sea of mud on their way to a 26-12 loss to I.E. Weldon last Friday. The terrible weather conditions favoured the heavier, slower Weldon squad, who held their soggy ground while the Redmen's normally fleet offense was left spinning their cleats.

A treacherous playing field wasn't the only challenge the Redmen faced. The offense was also missing its top scorer, running back Darren Danylyshen who is out with a leg injury, and guard John Vuksic. And defensive leader Chris Allaire also missed the game because of illness.

Weldon completely dominated play in the first half and led 20-0 at the break.

The Redmen finally got on the board in the third quarter when Ryan Timbers chalked up six points

PeeWees defeat Pickering teams

The Pickering "A" Panthers visited Haliburton on October 13 for two games and went away without a win.

The Keith Jackson Real Estate PeeWees coasted to 7-1 and 13-1 wins. Goals were scored by Jon Hebert, Tim Keefer, Derek Glendinning, Jim O'Neill, and Bill Koz.

Unfortunately, Mike Hartwick was lost to the team for six weeks when he broke a bone in his shoulder. Michael has been the most improved player on the team in the early going. His skills and positive attitude will be sorely missed in the coming weeks.

Jackie Morrison, Matt Galbraith, Curtis Reynolds and Tim Stouffer added to the offence from their defensive positions.

Pickering's lone markers were scored by Murray Sheehan who seemed to enjoy thwarting Brock Glendinning's shutout attempts.

A weekend earlier, the PeeWees came out on the Redmen pepper Weldon with goals; playoff berth assured

After allowing one goal earlier in the first half, the HHSS senior soccer team went on the offensive and scored six times against I.E. Weldon last Wednesday in Lindsay.

The action was down at Weldon's end when one of Weldon's players broke away with the ball. It was cold and windy and the sudden approach caught goalkeeper David Kinsella off guard, says coach Walter Tose. Kinsella couldn't stop that goal but would later make "an outstanding save on a breakaway shot."

Weldon's goal "made us all a little bit nervous," Tose says. That nervousness paid off: by the end of the first half, Haliburton was leading 2 to 1.

"After we scored three goals, they gave up a bit," the coach added. For one goal, five Haliburton players and no Weldon defensemen had converged around the Weldon goal. The goalkeeper "was throwing his arms up in frustration."

Excellent play was demonstrated by Jan Haedicke who scored three of Haliburton's goals, and Jason Goodall, Darryl Winder and Jeff Nash, who each scored one. Outside centre Paddy Taylor also played an outstanding game.

Nash's success at the net was "really quite a beautiful goal — a hard shot that went off the crossbars. I've never seen him kick that hard," Tose says.

Wednesday's win guarantees the Redmen a place in the playoffs. Their record this season is four wins and one loss. On Tuesday, they travel to Fenelon to match up with their arch-rival.

"This is the fifth year in a row it's been us versus Fenelon Falls" in the playoffs, Tose said. They've won three series, and Haliburton has won one.

"Who knows, it's hard to call," Tose says of Tuesday's game. "We can probably do it. It's just playing the game we know we have to play."

Juniors may be "the spoilers" of playoffs

The cold and wind were not in the Haliburton junior soccer squad's favour on Wednesday when they matched up against I.E. Weldon.

The Juniors lost the game, 2 to 1, putting them out of the playoffs this year.

"Weldon's controlled passing game and a strong win were dominant factors" in the loss, says coach Mark Flatman. "To wink the Juniors needed to score in the first half when they had the wind advantage."

However, Weldon made sure Haliburton had few passing opportunities. Then, in the second half, the wind was in Weldon's favour and the Lindsay team "turned to a kick-and-run style that helped them net their two goals," Flatman says.

The Juniors record stands at one win, one tie and three losses. The tie was against Lindsay Collegiate, which is now in first place. The Redmen take on Lindsay today (Wednesday) in what could be a spoiler for the leading team.

Redmen hockey team season begins Nov. 6

Prospective Haliburton Redmen hockey players will test their skating legs for the first time this season as the high school team opens training camp on Sunday morning.

Head coach Ron Yake will be back behind the bench again this season. He'll be assisted by Paul Morissette.

The regular schedule will begin at home on Tuesday, November 6 at 1:30 p.m. as the Redmen host Clarke high school from Newcastle.

POWERING TO VICTORY: The action was furious around the Haliburton Lumber net on Sunday night, as Curry Motors powered to a 15-7 victory. Brothers Chris and Andrew Hodgson led the attack with 4 goals each.

Scorers hit their stride, MHL action beginning to heat up

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

IT HAS BEEN AN EXCITING WEEK in the M.H.L. — too bad our intrepid reporter Chip Trueman wasn't here to see any of it. Better luck next week!

The action started on Tuesday in a match between Elstone Motors and Haliburton Lumber. Elstone's took the game 11-8 and the big story belongs to Kim Emmerson who managed to score three goals and three assists.

But while Emmerson was racking up the goals, last year's championship scorer, Ron Yake, managed to put only one away.

In the second game, Roberts-Austin Fuels took Emmerson Lumber 15-7. From the start Austin dominated Emmerson giving the Austin players a chance to mark up the score. The big scorers for Austin were: Erin Nicholls, 5 goals and 5 assists; Steve Roberts, 4 goals and 2 assists; Wade MacInnis 4 goals and 1 assist.

Moving on to Thursday's games, Youngdale Fuels squeaked by Curry Motors and managed to take the game 6-5. But the second game between Vasey Insurance and Bishop & Wilson proved to be brutal for Bishop, who lost 11-2. Right from the start, Vasey dominated the whole game and was greatly helped by Kevin Phillips "hat trick", 3 goals and 3 assists. Also helping out was Bernie Upton who put away 2 goals and 2 assists.

But honourable mention should go to the surveyors' Joe Roberts, who scored that team's only two goals.

The action really heated during Sunday's four games. In game one, Emmerson Lumber beat Vasey Insurance 5-1. The game was very tight right from the start, with a 1-0 score right after the 2nd period. However in the last 3 minutes of the game, Vasey's Carl Rowbotham managed to put one by Emmer-son's Vince Duchene. Sorry Vince.

In game two, Youngdale Fuels over Elstone Motors 10-6. In an amazing display, Youngdale managed to hit Elstone goalie Craig Woods' goal posts 10 times, but never made it in. Someone in the crowd said it sounded like "church bells going off". Elstone played very well even though they were five players short, but not well enough to beat Youngdale.

A special get well goes out to Tim Davies, who while scoring two goals for Youngdale, crashed into the boards and is now nursing a separated shoulder.

The whole league hopes that you feel better soon Tim!

In the third game, Curry Motors buried Haliburton Lumber 15-7. Brothers Chris and Andy Hodgson led the way for Curry, scoring 4 goals a piece. For Haliburton Lumber, Ron Yake was in charge of the scoring and he put away 4 goals himself, with 3 assists.

Finally, in the day's last game, Roberts-Austin Fuels topped Bishop & Wilson 14-7. The big scorer for Robert's was Erin Nicholls who scored 4 goals and had 3 assists. For Bishop, Tran LaRue managed to put away 2 goals.

winning end with two games against the Pickering "AA" Panthers.

The first game was played to a 3-3 draw. Haliburton got on the scoreboard early with goals by Tim Keefer and Derek Glendinning and held on for the tie as the Panthers came clawing back, led by Mathew Davis, Jonathan Cartile and Jason White.

In the dying seconds of the game Tim Keefer received a devastating check by Jonathan Cartile just as Tim was stepping on another player's stick. Tim crashed into the boards and was taken away on a stretcher.

Much to everyone's surprise, Tim returned for the second game and contributed a goal in Haliburton's 3-1 victory. Michael Hartwick played an outstanding game, scoring two goals, backchecking religiously and dishing out some devastating checks. Jackie Morrison also had a strong game. On numerous occasions he lugged the puck safely out of his own end. Jamie Cowan and Brock Glendinning both turned in stellar performances in the Haliburton net.

on a 6 yard plunge. The convert was missed, and on the kickoff, Weldon dampened the Redmen's hopes even further, returning the ball 80 yards for yet another touchdown.

Timbers added another six points to the Redmen's total with a 10 yard run, but they could not come any closer.

The Redmen now have their backs to the wall in their bid to earn a playoff spot. With a two and two record, they must win the final two games of the season to earn a berth in post season play. The outcome could be determined this Friday, when the Redmen host LCVI, starting at 1:30 p.m. A win would give the local boys shot at meeting Weldon on November 1 for the Kawartha West title.

Juniors still undefeated

The Juniors led off the action last Friday in Lindsay and continued their impressive domination of the league, powering to a 24-0 win to remain undefeated.

Field conditions were passable in the first half but deteriorated under a heavy downpour in the final 30 minutes.

Jerry Cooper and Chris Greenfield each scored touchdowns in the first half. In the second half, Andy Bacon made it 18-0 on a 15 yard run, while Paul Hewitt rounded out the scoring with six points on a fullback draw play. All the convert attempts were missed.

A strong defensive effort, led by linebackers Jerry Cooper, Ross Lemon and Greg Brohman kept Weldon's offense in check for the entire game.

While coach Gary Brohman doesn't want his juniors to make the classic mistake of being overconfident, he says he doesn't anticipate the team will have any trouble handling LCVI at home this Friday.

The final game of the season is also a home game for the Redmen, next Friday against Fenelon. Then it will be on the Kawartha West championship on Wednesday, October 31.

Careless hunting must be avoided

Every year in Ontario, many people are killed or injured in hunting accidents that could easily have been avoided. In the 10 years from 1980 to 1989, an average of 35 people a year were injured in Ontario hunting accidents, while an average of five were killed.

The most common hunting accidents involve careless use of firearms, unsafe use of boats, and getting lost in the bush. These can be avoided by taking a few "common sense", but essential, precautionary measures.

SAFETY REMINDERS: Car drivers are reminded to watch for those flashing red lights because all week long it is School Bus Safety Week around the county. A child's life may depend on it.

School bus safety relies on courtesy and caution

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

School bus drivers throughout Haliburton County want to remind drivers to stop when the red lights are flashing — it could be a matter of life and death.

"All that can be done from our end is done," says Barbara Todd of Todd's Busing in Minden. "We ask that drivers be more aware of school buses and their flashing lights."

On any given school day in Ontario approximately 700,000 children climb aboard at least 16,000 school buses to get to class. Todd says it is 16 times less likely that your child would be injured in a school bus rather than a car collision.

Todd credits strict safety regulations and rigorous driver training for making school bus travel one of the most safest means of transportation in the country. She also says that it is one of the most well supervised industries in Canada and is supported by an extensive network, which includes mechanics, school boards, schools and the government.

Although Todd points to renegade car drivers who refuse to stop as a major concern for bus operators, she says sometimes the children themselves can pose a risk for the driver.

"If the kids are under control, it allows the driver to pay even more attention to what he is doing."

To assist bus drivers, last year Todd assisted the county in instituting what she calls "discipline forms". When a child acts up, the bus driver fills out one of the forms as a warning. If the child continues to act up, a second form will be filled out and both the school principal and the child's parents will be informed.

If the child's behavior has not improved and a third form is needed, the child may be suspended from riding the bus to school. "The forms give the driver a much better tool to operate with," she said. "So far, the forms are working well."

But Todd says that discipline forms are not the only way to help the situation. "We need the support of teachers and parents to teach kids that the bus driver needs their help and co-operation when they are trying to drive."

In order to help children further understand safety needs, OPP Constable Mike Maybee has spoken to several classes at Archie Stouffer Elementary, and has taken the kindergarten classes and grade ones on a safety tour of a school bus.

Two weeks ago Maybee gave the same tour to classes at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary.

But even though School Bus Safety Week began on Monday and will end this Friday, children's safety should be a constant concern, says JDHS Vice-principal David McKinlay. "We have to be conscious of our children's safety every day."

Todd adds that school buses may not win any beauty contests for looks, but they are very well equipped to provide Haliburton youngsters with the safest way to get to class.

a water heater tank.

Under the seat on the left is space for equipment you need when traveling, and most of the space under the seat on the right is taken up with a water tank and a pumping system. Opposite the stove is the kitchen sink, and as you work your way forward up the aisle there is a small clothes closet.

Next to that, behind the driver's seat is our tiny washroom — 23x52 inches — which contains a toilet, a sink with a cupboard below and a shower which would probably be useful in an emergency. Personally, the idea of taking a shower whilst sitting on the john is beyond me...

And that's it, folks. All the space it took for the two of us and the dog for three months last year. I hope you can visualize it from the description. If it seems small to you, we think it's so much bigger and handier than the little van with the Coleman stove that had to be used on the picnic table, regardless of the weather!

As far as the column goes, my little laptop computer has a converter that plugs into the trailer's 12-volt system — on a separate battery from the one that starts and runs the engine. I can sit at the table, anywhere and write with it.

The battery-operated system that runs the lights, the water pump, and almost everything else gets a boost each day from a portable generator — when we're not in a camp with regular hydro. When it's recharging things, I can also run copies off on my printer, and we can send columns back to The Echo by mail, by fax machine, or by a computer link called a modem.

This was written just before we left, but by the time you're reading it we should be on our way!

Drag Lake cottagers urge development limit

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Drag Lake is reaching its capacity and Dysart council should keep a close eye on development, says its property owners' association.

In a letter to council, association president Al Ferguson outlines their main concerns:

• More development will increase pollution and adversely affect "the already fragile fishery population." With a ban on ice fishing, there are more lake trout "and we do not want to see this work destroyed."

• Lakeshore owners often have boats. More owners, more boats, more noise.

• More boats also means more opportunities for boating and water-skiing accidents.

• People come to the lake to enjoy

AHM council wary of selling parkland

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Minden council wants guarantees that the Staanworth Non-profit Housing Corporation will build only seniors apartments on land adjacent to the community centre.

Council had already agreed in principle to sell 3.5 acres of parkland to the corporation across from the two seniors apartment buildings the corporation has already built.

But when corporation chairman Ed Pergolas mentioned they had also received approval to build 20 subsidized family units, council got confused as to what use the land was intended for.

The corporation was acting as a sponsor for the Haliburton Social Action Committee's application for family housing, Pergolas said. "This has nothing to do with the property we're discussing."

By law, however, the corporation cannot exclude anyone when applying for government funds so the minutes of its last meeting say the land could be used for other-than-seniors housing. The wording is taken from the Ministry of Housing manual and is the same wording used to apply for the other two seniors complexes, Pergolas said.

"I'm concerned about density," said Councillor Mike Maher. He recently voted against Mark Rutale's nearby condominium proposal on the assumption a seniors complex is to be built. If the land will now include family housing, "I've defeated my own discussion."

Pergolas and Bob Beeney reiterated that only a 36-unit seniors building was proposed for the land. However, the corporation needs to own the land to make formal application for funding.

On this point, Councillor Bob Sisson was wary of moving too quickly and selling off parkland. "If you get the grant, fine. If you don't, we still get to keep the property."

Pergolas agreed that a condition of sale would be that the property can only be used for the 36-unit seniors complex.

There was one other point of debate — the price. The municipality is asking for $50,000.

Deputy-reeve Bern Berry says it's a "ridiculously low offer."

Reeve Ray Moore compared the price to a larger piece of private property on the north side of the community centre. It is selling for $17,000 an acre so Minden's price is reasonable, he said.

But Berry then quoted prices for the Moore family's property on the Bobcaygeon Road: $150,000 for 149' by 175'; $150,000 for 48' by 175'; and $100,000 for 75' by 175' with an old red building.

"That's commercial property," Moore said.

"Are you doing the best thing for the taxpayers," Pergolas asked. The ministry gives the corporation funding based on units. That money has to pay for the land. The more expensive the land, the less money available to spend on the building.

Usually the ministry likes the land tions.

Treat every firearm as if it is loaded. Never point a gun at anything you do not intend to kill, and know where your firearm is pointed at all times.

Never fire from a vehicle, and never carry loaded guns in vehicles. Unload guns before climbing fences, jumping ditches or walking through dense bush.

If hunting with a partner, always know where the other person is. Wear fluorescent orange or red clothing rather than camouflage gear, so that you are highly visible in the bush. Unload all guns after returning to camp.

When using a boat, never overload, and ensure weight is evenly distributed, even if it means making additional trips. Life jackets should be worn by everyone on the boat.

Take extra clothing that is warm and waterproof to protect yourself from hypothermia. Carry an area map and compass at all times, and leave a timetable with a friend or relative, so they'll know when to expect your return.

For more information on hunting safety, contact your local OPP detachment.

Dysart dump changes welcomed

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to Reeve Bill Davis and was noted at last Tuesday's Dysart et al Council meeting.

Members of Council:

In years gone by a trip to our local landfill site was something that was easy to put off until tomorrow. With refuse lying everywhere, it was especially distasteful during the summer months.

At first, it did not sink in that the situation had changed but suddenly it clicked in my mind that things had changed dramatically. Tires are piled in safe rows in case of fire. Household garbage is disposed of in an orderly manner. There is even a sign to indicate that there is free firewood — a sensible alternative to burying it.

"On one of my visits, I stopped to compliment the custodian, Sam Charlton, on the change. As he stood there with a pitch fork in his hand, he replied 'People are co-operating really well.' He went on to say, 'Look at that man over there with the tire in his hand, I'll bet he'll put it on the pile.' Sure enough, he did.

There is an old cliché that says 'There are 18 inches between a slap on the back and a kick in the behind — but what a difference in the impact'.

On other visits when others are there, I have said 'Isn't this a pleasant change?' All have agreed.

In this regard, it would be appreciated, I'm sure, if it could be brought to this man's attention that his efforts have not gone unnoticed.

Sincerely, Walter M. Thomas, Haliburton.

Voting rights a contentious issue and older; disabled persons older than 18; volunteers interested in participating in any of the programs; users of any HCHSS service; and any senior citizens club or group.

However, one contentious issue was not resolved before the two-hour meeting was over: does membership imply voting rights?

At the June annual meeting, approximately 20 people — including the Robinsons and McLeod — walked out when they were denied a vote. At all previous general meetings, votes were taken by a show of hands on the floor. It was assumed anyone associated with Home Support was a member and had the right to vote.

In June, the executive said general membership did not have the right to vote because they were not legitimate members. When Robinson asked how they could become members, she was told it was too late. Voting rights were never discussed or voted on by anyone other than the executive, McLeod later said. He and the others believe the denial of voting privileges was unconstitutional, and if Friday's discussion had taken place before June's meeting, the walkout needn't have occurred.

At Friday's meeting, time ran out before they discussed voting rights. Constitution committee chairman Helen Henderson said another public meeting would be held and that the final proposals will also be open for public comment.

As the constitutional changes are discussed, people are invited to send signed comments to Home Support.

New show at Rails' End Gallery gets to the bottom of concepts

AT THE GALLERY

by: HOLLY G. HUTCHISON

CHAIRS HAVE ALWAYS held a particular fascination for Doreen Wilson, in that they all seem to have auras which are born from the lingering energy of the many people who have sat in them. For Doreen, chairs hold life and history and possibly even secrets. This enchantment has led Doreen to explore.

Chairs at the Rails' End Gallery from October 20 to November 17, is an exhibition about ideas and about our interaction with surroundings. Through Doreen's interpretation of chairs and their relationship to her and others, she has created an exhibition of paintings and sculpture which is all at once serious, humorous, whimsical, delightful, political, nostalgic, shocking and stimulating.

Doreen will be in attendance at the Gallery periodically throughout this exhibition to engage in conversation which will continue the exploration, invention and discovery process of chairs, and the exhibition Chairs. Please feel welcome to join her.

An Artist's Reception will be held on October 20th (Saturday), 1990 between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. The public is warmly welcomed to attend.

Further information about this exhibition may be obtained from the office of the Rails' End Gallery, 457-2330.

Bridge needs work

An engineer has completed his report on the aging St. Peter's Bridge.

Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis says council will have to study the report and decide whether or not to fix up the bridge or build a new one.

"We will have to start planning ahead," he says.

Council has also agreed to appoint a township delegate to the Public Liaison Committee for the county's Waste Management Master Plan. The PLC will report directly to the plan's Steering Committee and would be made up of 10 members, each representing a township.

to be donated. With the two previous complexes, the municipality sold the land for $12,000 and $20,000.

The municipality benefits because of the increased tax base and having the seniors spending their money in the village, Pergolas said.

"You're creating a service for seniors," he added. "Once they become too frail to live at home, where do they go?" Hyland Crest has a long waiting list.

"You're not dealing with developers for God's sake. We're all supposed be working on the same side for the same people."

SECTION 2

To leave . . . or to fight?

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

LIKE A BEACON in the wilderness, the gleaming white cross of the Haliburton United Church shines forth over the Drag River, calling all souls to worship. By its size, it glows with strength. By its image, it glows with the promise of life everlasting.

For many of the worshippers inside, the massive cross has come to mean a call to arms. With a double-edged sword of faith and conviction, they want to fight against a church hierarchy which shuns their wishes and, they believe, undermines the tenets of Biblical teachings.

They are not fighting against homosexuals. They are not fighting against an open and humble church. It's not what they're against, as much as what they're for: the supremacy of scripture and the ideals which forged the coming together of various denominations in 1925.

Just as Ireland can't shake The Troubles, the United Church of Canada finds The Issue clinging tenaciously to its very being, and without the glory of a crown of thorns.

Although the two men sitting in the book-lined office at the Haliburton United Church believe the argument has gone beyond The Issue, as they discuss the church's options following the latest controversial General Council decision, The Issue keeps creeping up. Perhaps it's better to deal with it and get it out of the way.

The push to deal formally with homosexuality (taken to mean both women and men choosing same-sex partners for this article) began with a 1980 report, In God's Image.

"In words to the effect, it said where a relationship had integrity and was loving, that was okay," says the Reverend Jim Crighton. It didn't spell out the traditional view of the practice of homosexuality as a sin. As a result, "that was felt as the start of a move away from the traditional morality."

Because the people in the pews were not consulted about such a fundamental change in philosophy, Dale Robinson says it also gave people the sense of an arrogant church hierarchy, imposing its will from above. When the United Church was formed in 1925, founders believed they were getting away from the politics of faith so they could concentrate on worship.

It's the Membership, Ministry, Human Sexuality report which really caused the furor. It called for a confession of complicity in the persecution of homosexuals throughout history. It also said all people who profess obedience to Jesus Christ are free to be received as members of the United Church. And all members, regardless of sexual orientation, church is organized.

There's an overwhelming consensus that people want to stay. But at the same time, they want to give some expression of dissent,' say Dale Robinson and Rev. Jim Crighton. For those who feel they must leave, "we have to respect that people decide according to their conscience. We have to respect that and wish them well."

It's very complicated. Like any system of government, it is supposed to have checks and balances to ensure the people are being heard. There are presbyteries, and conferences, and councils, each with representation from the grassroots.

If parishioners ignored the edicts of the head church, they ignored the representative process even more. This allowed people with their own missions to become elected. Candidates for election weren't grilled on their beliefs on sexuality or whether they echoed the beliefs of their congregations. Church people all seem so nice, so why get personal about it.

Increasingly, the delegates seemed to be removed from their congregations, Rev. Crighton and Mr. Robinson believe. Yet there were still some close votes: At a Bay of Quinte Conference, there was a petition asking that the words "regardless of sexual orientation" be removed from MMHS. It lost by a vote of 172-169.

"One thing this whole thing has done is it's made all of us wake up and investigate how these people are elected and the politics of the church," says Mr. Robinson.

To make sure local delegates to August's General Council meeting in London knew how the congregations felt, a special meeting was called last winter at the Minden United Church. Once again, most of the people in the pews were against the MMHS and most of the people with voting privileges were for it.

"One thing this whole thing has done is it's made us all wake up and investigate how these people are elected and the politics of the church."

"They said they didn't feel obligated to express our decision (against MMHS)," says Mr. Robinson. "We are listening to you but that doesn't mean we have to follow what you're saying," one delegate told them.

With this in mind, when the MMHS was voted on and re-affirmed in London, "I thought it was somewhat of a victory that it wasn't extended in some way," says Rev. Crighton.

"I am just as vocal about the process as the decision," Mr. Robinson now says.

Rev. Crighton is also critical of where the delegates say their inspiration comes from. While delegates believe they were listening to the word of God, he believes they were receiving a lesson on group dynamics.

"At General Council, people get together for a long period of time," he explains. "For 10 days, they live in the same dormitory, they eat together, they spend a lot of effort on building relationships — these people also work very hard as well — they're cut off from friends and family, and cut off from newspapers."

"What happens is a group spirit takes over. When they say the Spirit is moving amongst them, I question whether it's the Holy Spirit."

With well-meaning pressure, emotional attachments and forming friendships, for the people who have been accused of being homophobic "it's very difficult to maintain an entrenched position."

Whatever the process, whatever the spirit, many people back home did not think they could live with Council's decision. They now had to make a few decisions of their own.

"No doubt the people who are leaving the church can't stay in a church that supports this decision," says Mr. Robinson. "But there are more of us here who feel we want to stay together and work to change the process. That's what I'm working for."

"We go on about how unrepresentative the United Church is," says Rev. Crighton, "but I would still prefer this than a Pope who tells me what to do."

"But at least you know the (Catholic) Church's position," Mr. Robinson says. "We resent being led in a direction we don't want to go."

Sitting in church on Sunday mornings, Mr. Robinson looks at the stained glass windows, dedicated to people who have helped to build a vital and thriving church. Their memory lives in him as he tries to deal with the modern-day church.

"We need to carry on that heritage. This is not the first crisis," he says, referring to Union, when people also had to agonize over what their faith meant. "People have stayed together and that's what we have to do now. We are looking at ways we can take action, ways we can actually do something."

"Some people feel to be identified with the United Church is embarrassing. People will judge the United can offer themselves for ordination.

Except for the confession, which he feels uncomfortable with, Rev. Crighton "would be prepared to leave it alone had not other people seized on the thought that sexual orientation includes practice."

"It's a moral issue which goes to the heart of many things — how we understand scripture, morality, marriage and family."

"... I'm always aware of what homosexuals would say about what I am saying," Rev. Crighton begins on what has become a painful topic for many.

"The practice of homosexuality is a sin. It's not a sin to be so inclined, it's what you do with the inclination. We are all sinners in church."

If an alcoholic wants to be ordained, "we say drink no more. ... Homosexuals says my particular thing isn't a sin," but for Rev. Crighton it's necessary to remember that "with sin is forgiveness."

The church asked for people's response to the MMHS. In the three points of the Haliburton charge — Haliburton Village, Lochlin and Ingoldsby — 95 per cent of the congregations were against the ordination of practicing homosexuals.

"As a congregation, we should welcome anybody into the church," says Mr. Robinson. It's a question of whether a practicing homosexual should be standing in the pulpit.

As it became obvious the United Church of Canada, UCC, was going to go ahead and make MMHS a policy, local congregations also signed petitions and voiced objections, sometimes through Community of Concern, to such a move. Frustration built when the UCC seemed hell-bent on disregarding their wishes. That's when The Issue stopped being the main issue in the debate.

"I think what a lot of people are upset about is that their opinions are not heard," says Mr. Robinson. Rev. Crighton adds "People have disagreed strongly with many stands the church has taken — you could predict what the United Church was going to say about Free Trade and the GST."

These left-leaning tendencies were for a long time ignored. "You can be a loyal church member and still dissent. Many said 'Oh, this doesn't affect me,'" says Rev. Crighton. But the MMHS did affect them. Strongly.

Once assured everyone in the parish felt the same way, parishioners took a serious look at how the Church united over issue

Church by what they see in the community. If we act in a positive way, we'll be judged that way. Our strongest base is our congregation."

Unlike many others, the Haliburton, Lochlin and Ingoldsby congregations have not let this issue divide them. There is respect for others' decisions, no matter what that may be. Neighbour is not fighting with neighbour, there are no angry silences. The churches have truly remained united.

"There's an overwhelming consensus that people want to stay, but at the same time, they want to give some expression of dissent," says Rev. Crighton. "They don't want to stay and be passive. The task is finding a viable form or vehicle of sharing our dissent."

What happens if each congregation breaks away and after that decision is made, there's no consensus on which direction their new denomination should take them? "What begins in schism ends in schism."

"There's also great value in Christians coming together and being able to speak with a common voice. There's great value in having a vision of the entire nations. The United Church has always been a voice for people who have been dispossessed, who are in need."

"I never thought about leaving," says Mr. Robinson, who along with others credits Rev. Crighton's leadership for keeping the bitterness out of the decision-making process. "We have to respect that people decide according to their conscience. We respect that and wish them well."

"I'm staying because I don't see any alternative," says Rev. Crighton, who returns Mr. Robinson's compliment by noting the strong leadership provided within the congregation. "I don't find any other denomination where I could escape these kinds of problems. The history of the church is dealing with heresy."

The apostles John, Peter and Paul all talk of fighting false teaching and false teachers. "That's a constant in the New Testament. It's something that has to be done constantly. You're not going to escape that."

"You have to look inside yourself, making sure you're building the right foundation and keeping in the love of Jesus Christ. It's fighting the fight of faith."

"People say they want to stay and fight. Well, we've had enough fighting. We're just tired of it," says Ray Johnson of why he and his wife Chris believe they must leave the United Church.

Their argument, they stress repeatedly, is not with the Haliburton church, which they love dearly. It's with a church hierarchy they find increasingly difficult to remain associated with.

"Is the church always something we disagree with," Mr. Johnson asks of the message his children seem to have been getting for years. "Sooner or later, they'll start saying we don't want this any more."

They also want their church to be sending clear messages to their children, based on scriptures.

"We love all people. If a minister is homosexual and celibate, that doesn't matter," he said. When General Council wouldn't speak out against practicing homosexual ministers, "our concern was they had taken part of the scripture and negated it. What's to stop them from saying the Bible is no longer valid at all?"

It was their hope that after General Council, the Haliburton church as a whole would become a separate body from the UCC. In doing so, they also hoped they could keep the building, a contentious legal battle which seems to favour the UCC as owners. When it became clear this wasn't to be, they agonized over their next move — a move away from the United Church.

With frustration and emotion in his voice, Mr. Johnson speaks for many people when he sadly concludes "These issues take up far too much time and take you away from God's word."

Agonizing is a word many people use to describe their inner struggle. They search scriptures and their souls for answers. They confront their faith and ask what it means to them. They question the role the church as an institution plays in that faith.

Only three people wanted to talk publicly about their struggle for this article. Others felt drained of emotion, fearful of having their emotions wrenched out of them again, as if they hadn't been wrenched enough.

However, perhaps some good has come out of this, they add in private. A re-examination of faith strengthens it. And that strength is now being turned against a hierarchy which had come to expect a passive flock. There may be more surprises in store for the United Church of Canada yet. Or at least that's what the people of Haliburton United Church are preparing for.

Rare disease strikes a well-liked resident

CARNARVON NEWS

by: ANN McKAY

Our thoughts and prayers for Bob Cowen who is very poorly in the Civic Hospital Peterborough. Bob has been there for several weeks and has been diagnosed to have Eplasto-Mycosis, something quite rare with only about six known cases in Canada. Mrs. Maisie Davies of Toronto was a weekend guest of Stan and Mildred Archer.

Mrs. Joan Fennell and Fred Chapple spent the weekend in Toronto with Mrs. and Mrs. Mark Fennell, Scott and new baby brother.

We are saying Goodbye to many of our summer residents these days and to some of the folks following the sun. May we wish them all a happy and carefree winter. Safe wishes to all.

Those of us who attended the Congregational Pot Luck on Sunday night had a really enjoyable time. After supper old hymns were sung, led by Jack Gregory with Eleanor Hamilton on piano.

The observation of World Food Day is this week. If each one of us doubled our efforts to share we could make a great difference to the hungry of the world.

A very well-kept secret was revealed Saturday night when a surprise birthday party was held at Stanhope Fire Hall for Mrs. Rick Lowes. Nancy was very surprised to find her relatives and many friends from Halls Lake, Carnarvon, Minden, Toronto and many other places. Nancy is the daughter of Dolores and Fred Gardne and a granddaughter to Edith Russell. A nasty bout of 'flu seems to be making the rounds. A word to our older citizens: Remember to get a flu shot.

Heating in the Winter.
Air Conditioning in the Summer. It's all there, right under our Feet.

If you want to reduce your electric heating bill, look down at your feet. Now look a few feet further. Look at the earth itself. It could be your next source of heating and air conditioning.

Ground source heat pumps are designed to draw heat from the earth and pump it into your home. In the summer, the ground source heat pump reverses its operation. It extracts heat and humidity from your home and pumps it into the earth. The excess heat can also be used to heat domestic hot water or swimming pools and hot tubs.

This is truly the cleanest most efficient way to heat and air condition your home. And while ground source heat pumps cost more than traditional furnaces and air conditioners they soon pay for themselves with savings. That's why today's progressive home builders and renovators are specifying them for their clients.

Call us for more information about ground source heat pumps. You'll see that one of the most advanced technologies in heating and cooling is as old as the earth itself.

Fall Fair brings dancers to school

DORSET NEWS

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

We wish a very happy birthday to David McKey who celebrated on October 14th.

Two wedding anniversaries are coming up in the near future. Bas and Lorraine reached the big one on October 11th, when they had been married 50 years. We wish them many more years of happiness. Irene and Jack Clayton celebrated their 45th anniversary on the 12th of October. Congratulations and much happiness to both couples.

The high winds and the rain really played havoc with the scenic beauty that we were surrounded with. It always seems that the fall colouring, like beautiful sunsets, disappears too soon.

On September 21, Janet Green of Huntsville, daughter of Marcella and the late Hector McKay, of Dorset was married to Darcy Roberts of Huntsville.

The bride's maid was Sandy Lupton, of Huntsville, the best man was Ken McIntyre of Burks Falls. The bride was dressed in winter white outfit trimmed with pearls and sequins and wore a pearl necklace, a gift of the groom. The ceremony was held in Bracebridge. A dinner followed at MacDonald's Sportsmen Restaurant, Huntsville for the Bridal party and guests.

Later there was a reception and buffet at the Huntsville Centennial Centre where a huge number of relatives and friends gathered. During the evening M.P. Stan Darling dropped in to wish them well and presented them with a congratulatory plaque.

The reception Hall was filled with relatives and friends from Toronto, Barrie, Keswick, Kearney, Huntsville, Oshawa, Dwight, Hillside, Burks Falls, Magnetawan, Trenton, Sprucedale and Dorset. The happy couple are on a honeymoon trip through north eastern Ontario, then spending some time in Atlantic City, N.J.

We hope everyone who is eligible will get their "flu shot". There is a vicious flu working its way through the area. Len and Eileen Barry have been laid up with a dose of it.

Earl McKay from New Lowell has been visiting Marcella McKay, helping her get her home ready for the winter months.

The Fall Fair held at the Dorset Elementary School was once again a great success, and was well attended. Everyone enjoyed seeing the many exhibits, having B.B.Q., hot-dogs and sampling the winning chili. A tasty carrot cake was donated by Irene Crews for dessert.

There was live entertainment. John McLennan played the guitar and his sister, Nina Robertson, of Baysville, demonstrated Clog dancing. The Committee thanks them for their efforts. The Minden police were their testing the fastest ball thrower with their Radar. The Dorset Fire Department had its truck on display to the delight of the children. Despite the fact that the weather wasn't kind to gardeners there were many displays of excellent vegetables. There was also a fine display of baking goods such as Daddy and Ma cookies, etc. The judges were hard pressed awarding prizes, all entries being so good, and deserve a vote of thanks for their work.

The Dorset Business Community donated the lovely prizes that were given. The Organizers and hostess of the fair wish to express their thanks for their generosity, the individual names being too numerous to list. A list of the various winners will be available in the near future, and will be posted in the Dorset Library.

On October 31st, Halloween, the Dorset seniors will meet at 8:30 so residents may be at home for the trick and treats. Everyone is encouraged to arrive in costume for a fun time. The men will be sponsoring a Vegas night with games for everyone.

Should be a great time for one and all.

H.H. For anyone with impaired vision and has trouble seeing the arrows on Childproof pill bottles, line up the points with permanent ink, paint or nail polish. Use the marked bottle for refills.

An entertaining week

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Since I was down to Peterborough for a week, part of our news items are not entered in my column. September 27, the Ladies of the Anglican Church Women of Kinnmount brought the lunch for the tea party and the Residents thank them all very much. The bingo was held in the auditorium at 7:00 p.m.

Friday afternoon was Happy Hour with Bill Payne, Don Burch and Eldon Deacon providing the entertainment. We thank them sincerely.

I came home from Peterborough Saturday evening. Sunday, Terry and Norma came down and we went for a drive and had dinner at Kozy Korner in Haliburton.

Rev. Burgess conducted the Chapel Service Sunday evening. Alice was unable to be present so we had no organ music. Thank you Rev. Burgess doubly.

Monday Jack and Ruth Foster were here for a sing-along. The music was delightful and certainly brightened up a lonely holiday. There are few songs they can't sing.

Congratulations to Lucy Burgess who had a birthday Oct. 6, Marjory McIntosh Oct. 6, Ethel Shaw, Oct. 7, also Lula Farrell on Oct. 9. Birthday wishes from us all.

Monday evening Tom and Dori McAllister showed us two films: "Scotland" and "Country Coyote Goes to Hollywood". Tom and Dori volunteered to show the movies and we thank them greatly.

When Ruth and Jack Foster were here, Lynn

Shirley brought in a beautiful platter of mixed fruit for our enjoyment.

One day last week Karl Samuelson dropped in for a visit. I was sorry I was away.

Tuesday morning Pastor James Fast conducted the Chapel Service and accompanied the hymns with his guitar. Thank you.

After lunch on Tuesday, Doris took us for an outing on the bus. We went up the North Road to Vankoughnet Road and almost to the town and came back to Carnarvon and down Highway 35 home. We stopped at Kawartha Dairy.

Mary Oliver's daughter is home from the hospital after major operations. We hope she is completely well soon.

Wednesday evening Earl Cooper and Kathy Owen were here and gave us a lovely musical evening and we thank them very much.

MONK / CRAY WEDDING: The wedding of Kirsten Leah Monk and Barry Alexander Cray was solemnized on September 8th, 1990 at Christ Church Anglican in Bobcaygeon. Kirsten is the daughter of Donna and Gord Monk of Minden.

Trent-Severn report

The reservoir lakes were at 43.5 percent of their full capacity on October 1, which means if you are on a lake with 1.2 metres of available storage, the level would have declined approximately 70 centimetres or about 2-1/2 feet since the spring. Minimum flows have been maintained in the tributary rivers to the main system.

Discharges along most of the Waterway are expected to increase in the coming weeks as dams are set for the winter season. Water levels will likely drop only a few more centimetres before stabilizing for the fall.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Health 65 is a senior's key to free health care

KINMOUNT & AREA NEWS

by: MILLIE MOSS

Hi! Hope all of you enjoyed your Thanksgiving holiday.

A very happy day is wished for Jean and George Crisp of Norland who celebrate their forty-first wedding anniversary on October 22.

The Norland Volunteer Firefighters Hockey Pool has started up again for this season and the first winner of this year is Grace Graham of Norland.

Norland Area Seniors will be holding their Annual Bazaar on Saturday, November 3, from 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. at Norland Community Hall. There will be refreshments. Come out and meet your friends.

Bob Marsh of RR1, Kinmount came over to our house on Wednesday evening, October 10 bringing with him his dad, who is visiting from England for a few months. What a great gent! Will be seeing more of him I'm sure, before he goes back home. He said he'd like to stay here in a little cabin back in the bush."

Living Alone? For seniors and disabled persons, an emergency Response System can be a life saver. For information call 705-457-2171, Haliburton County Home Support Services — assisted by Trillium Foundation.

Health Care Information Kits have been mailed to every household in Ontario. This kit contains details about how to register for a new plastic

Health 65 Card that replaces both the O.H.I.P. card and the Ontario Senior Citizens Privilege Card. If you did not receive a kit where you live, kits are also available at Canada post Offices and your local Ministry of Health Office. When you receive the new Health 65 Card, give the number to your pharmacist for his or her records. The Health 65 Card will enable Ontario Senior Citizens to obtain health benefits including approved, prescribed medication. Seniors should continue to use their current Ontario Senior Citizen Privilege Card number until their pharmacist advises that he or she is able to accept the Health 65 number. The Ministry recommends that you record your new Health 65 Card Number and put it in a safe place, in case the card is lost and the number is needed for replacement purposes. The Health 65 Card can also be used to enjoy admission free, or at reduced rates, to all provincial parks and many historical and cultural sites in Ontario; also, some municipal transit systems and business firms offer special rates to senior citizens. If you have any questions about registering for the Ontario Health Number and Drug Benefit eligibility, please contact: (613) 548-6552 (Kingston) or (416) 965-9337 Metro Toronto.

Do you have a small breed, short haired, female dog you'd like to send to a good home? If so, you may call 454-3816. Someone there would be very interested. Well folks, stay well and happy and give me a call at 454-2395 with your news for this column.

Golfers enjoy 1st tourney

LEGION NEWS

by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

Eighty-four members participated in the first Legion golf tournament and luncheon held at Pinestone recently under the committee direction of Cdes. Don Baird, Beryl Gorin, Jack Gorin and Bill Gibbens.

The first-place trophy in memory of Cdes. Irv Chambers and Murray Douglas was donated by Cde. Lloyd and Hazel Whittaker. The men's trophy was captured by Billy Whittaker, and the ladies' trophy went to Ellen Scribner. Many other prizes were donated, and the two draws for a month's accommodation in Florida were won by Ed Pickard and Hugh McCarthy.

The tournament raised $325. for the Heart Foundation and Cancer Fund. Plans are underway for a bigger and better tournament next year.

The D.V.A. representative will attend at the Branch on October 30, from 9:00 until noon. It may be some time before the next visit.

The Branch Executive was honoured to take part in the 1129 Cadet Corps awards night and inspection. Commanding Officer, Dennis Allaire, his staff and officers are to be commended for the progress they have made in such a short time. These young people are "R"—Respect — and their drills in self

Kawartha-Haliburton Children's Aid Society

The Kawartha-Haliburton Children's Aid Society would like to take the opportunity during Canadian Foster Families Week to recognize the dedicated foster parents who care for the children who are temporarily or permanently in the care of the society.

The board and staff want foster parents to know that the time given to our children is truly appreciated by the Society.

Ardent football fans: No skipping allowed

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

by: ERIN
LYNCH

THE STUDY HALL was full last week with students who had skipped last Friday afternoon to travel to Fenelon Falls to watch the football game.

Some students had permission and signed out, others just left. Students don't understand why leaving school to watch a football game is looked down upon by teachers and staff. A number of students felt that Mr. Brohman and Mr. Forgrave were being unfair and gave certain students — girlfriends of players, for instance — who had connections to the football team privileges. I decided to talk to Mr. Brohman and Mr. Forgrave to find out if any of this was true.

Students also think that even if they have written permission to go to a game, the school will not allow them to leave. Some think it would be easier to skip and not have the hassle. This is not true: students with permission to leave for the afternoon to watch the game did not get detentions, but Mr. Brohman sent a note home to parents stating why he disagrees with it. There are many reasons why Mr. Forgrave discourages it.

"It's my responsibility to ensure that students are attending school. They must until the age of 16. If students are choosing to attend school they have also chosen to abide by the rules the school enforces.

There is a direct relationship between attendance and success in school. I as the principal have the authority to allow students to be absent for short periods of time. This does not include spectating football games. Students are given opportunities to watch home games after school, during lunch hour, and they are let out for the opening game where there is supervision. We also have an agreement with other schools that students won't be there unsupervised."

Mr. Brohman also gave his reasons: "Parents sometimes give students permission to go to a football game. I disagree and therefore express my opinion why, by sending a letter home. Legally there is nothing we can do but to challenge and disagree with it. Often students leave school without permission and then bring a note afterward. Here they are given detentions because they did not have permission to leave in the first place.

"There are three reasons why I disagree with going to watch football games in other towns: One—missing school to watch a game; Two—students have enough opportunities at home games; Three—being out of school unsupervised," said Mr. Brohman. He feels that everyone thinks that football is given high priority. He does not agree with that!

Under the direction of Mr. Cooper and assistant Dorothy Sanderson, the Drama Club is working on the play "The Best Christmas Pageant Ever." There is a large cast of 25. The play shall prove to be a great success. No date has yet been set, but the second week in December looks probable. It will be performed around the community.

The Modern Language Club is planning a March Break trip to Greece. If you are interested contact Mr. Cooper. The Language Club is also planning a week of French, Une semaine française in June. This will include county-wide activities.

Canada World Youth a learning experience

Canada World Youth is now recruiting Canadians and landed immigrants between the ages of 17 and 20 (as of December 31, 1990) for exchange programs with countries in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean.

If you are working, studying, or looking for a job and are interested in participating in a challenging international development program, apply now. Along with other young people from across Canada and from overseas, participants spend seven months doing volunteer work in community development, agriculture, or social services. You will gain knowledge and skills that will help you in future academic or professional careers.

All expenses are covered by Canada World Youth during the program. Your commitment will be in the form of time, energy and an interest in learning. It is a challenging experience and one that will last a lifetime.

Exchanges start as early as July 1991. The final deadline for applications is JANUARY 31, 1991.

For application forms or more information, contact: CANADA WORLD YOUTH, Ontario Regional Office, 386 Bloor St. West, 2nd floor, Toronto M5S 1X4, (416) 922-0776.

Soyers Lk. residents look back

by PRIMROSE BIRRELL

The Fall Meeting of the Soyers Lake Ratepayers' Association was held on the evening of Saturday, October 6, at the PineStone Inn. Lew McCorriston chaired the meeting and welcomed the 40 members attending. He explained that he had been persuaded to carry on as President for another year with Lynda Campbell assisting as Vice-President.

MEMORIALS

A moment's silence was observed in memory of Trevor Cooper, a long-time resident of Blairhampton Road, who passed away on August 27th.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Neale Harris presented the Treasurer's report. Corn Roast committee chairman Lynda Campbell reported that a manual had been prepared to assist future organizers of this event. Regatta organizer David Pengelly had also prepared a comprehensive manual and expressed hopes for an enlarged regatta with many categories next year. For Neighbourhood Watch, Bruce Birrell reported that some construction materials had been taken from a Poverty Bay site. As Publicity Person he also reported that "Echo" reporters were invited to the corn roast and published several pictures. Directory and Lake Map chairman David Pengelly advised that the current listing includes 150 residences on Soyers Lake.

Pollution Control chairman Ross Partridge was absent due to illness but it was reported that volunteers had carried on with the water testing program throughout the summer. An article published in "County Life" on June 13th was mentioned, describing Ross's work on the loon survey for the Long Point Bird Observatory. Members were reminded of the need to upgrade old septic systems to avoid pollution of the lake.

DISCUSSION

Topics discussed included the continuing delay in obtaining official approval of Minden's zoning by-law No. 86-26, the progress of a group application by 13 Poverty Bay residents to acquire their 66' lakeshore road allowances, hopes that the new Ontario government would honour their election pledge to provide 18 chronic care beds for Haliburton Hospital, the proposed rezoning of three lots on Soyers Lake, the difficulty of enforcing anti-noise by-laws, and possible insurance coverage for Association activities such as the Corn Roast.

ECHO BAY

At the request of Ormonde and Marion Kentner, owners of the former Echo Bay Camp, a resolution was passed that the historic designation "Echo Bay" be incorporated in the next edition of the lake map.

HALIBURTON HIGHLANDS WATER MANAGEMENT ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Lew McCorriston reported on a public information symposium put on by this Committee at the Legion hall in Haliburton on September 28th. He noted that of the 40 or so people in the hall, half were government representatives and six of the remaining 20 were from Soyers Lake. Those taking part included Bill Brown, Chairman of the recently-formed Trent-Severn Reservoir Lakes Council, Dysart Reeve Bill Davis, two speakers from the Ministry of Natural Resources, and John Lewis, Manager of Parks Canada Service which operates the Trent-Severn authority must maintain six feet of water for shipping in the canal system by drawing down water from the reservoir lakes, regardless of the greatly increased use of those lakes over the intervening years. He suggested that if owners of lake property were not satisfied with the status quo, they should seek legislative changes in Ottawa. One of the bureaucrats commented on the sparse attendance at the meeting, to which a ratepayer replied that if the meeting had been held at a week-end prior to Labour Day the hall would have been filled to capacity with concerned ratepayers.

ANSON, HINDON & MINDEN RATEPAYERS' ASSOCIATION

The President reported on recent meetings of representatives of lake associations in Minden township concerned with presenting a common front in dealings with Council. It was pointed out that the potential vote from Lakeshore residents would be more than sufficient to bring in candidates of their choice who would be more sympathetic to their concerns than some members of previous Councils. Association members were urged to consider possible candidates.

ELECTION OF DIRECTORS

Directors re-elected for a further two-year term were Victor Ettel, Burt Tait, Bruce Birrell, David Pengelly, John Thorne, Lynda Campbell and Primrose Birrell.

PROPOSED NEWSLETTER

David Pengelly was authorized to draft an Association newsletter in co-operation with Publicity Person Bruce Birrell.

SPRING MEETING

It was resolved that a Spring Meeting be held on Saturday, May 18, 1991 at 7:30 p.m. It was agreed that a guest speaker should be invited to talk about the reclamation of natural shorelines. The possibility of holding one meeting per year during the summer will be discussed at the spring meetings.

JONES/WILES WEDDING: Wearing a dramatic gown designed by David Rae and reminiscent of Gone With the Wind, Shelley Ann Jones, daughter of Rowatt and Vera Jones of Oshawa, married Christopher Thomas Wiles, son of Terry Wiles of Orillia on August 25, 1990 at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Minden. After a reception at the PineStone Inn and honeymooning in Key West, Florida, the couple now resides in Ottawa.

Selling Power The Echo's Classifieds work!

Fundamental # 6

"YOU PAY ONLY WHEN THE JOB GETS DONE!"

The sale of a home involves many specialists, primarily your REALTOR. And much of the selling process carries up-front costs, which are borne by the REALTOR.

REALTORS work very hard for their fees. They get paid only when, or if, the house is sold. And because of this, you benefit not only from their expertise, but also from their desire to achieve the best for you from your most important asset: your home.

...and that can make a REAL difference!

Supper Club has birthday

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

Congratulations to Ray Sisson on winning the $200. prize out of the 1,800 surveys returned to the Haliburton County Development Corporation survey on monies spent in the County.

In October Ray and Norma flew from Ottawa to Edmonton for two weeks with their son Darren and his wife Debbie. They enjoyed beautiful Lake Louise, Banff and Jasper as well as a look at the Columbia Icefields.

It is with regret that I report that Rene Hill, recently of Comox and Duncan, B.C., has died. She leaves her husband, Stan, her son Martin and daughter Ann Chevrier. Rene was well known years ago in Haliburton as she worked in the Post Office. She was a beloved friend of mine over the years, and those of us so blessed have missed her since the Hills went to B.C. We are touched in a different way by sadness since we learned of the family's bereavement.

The ladies of the W.G. Baptist Church here served the evening meal at the Centre on October 14 for the Sunday Supper Club. About thirty attended and enjoyed the good food and company. This happens once a month, and you are welcome to get in touch with Nancy Brink at 457-2222, or 754-2516 after 6 p.m. It was the first anniversary of the Club, and to mark the occasion, eight prizes were handed out, including the balloon bouquet to Phyllis Pearsell who has not missed any of these Sundays. The list of people who come had reached 50 but there is room for as many as are interested, especially if you are alone or would just like to be part of the group whatever the circumstances. A birthday or get-well card is always sent upon appropriate occasions. Please turn to page 26

COMMUNITY NEWS

Fire Prevention week draws out future firemen

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

Fire Prevention week offered an opportunity to view our new fire truck, meet some of the volunteers and talk with Ralph Watson, Fire Chief. On display at the hall was equipment used for the sometimes dangerous business of fighting fires, rescuing victims of car accidents and attending to medical problems in the home. At Fire Station 2 in Tory Hill is the Fire Hall that houses the original little pumper of 1959 and the other fire truck. The building has been painted red recently.

The poster collection at the school brought out the pupil's enthusiasm for the subject. Marian Donovan had a difficult time choosing winners from the many fine drawings. She explained that it is not the best and the neatest examples that must be considered but those that carried the message of fire attention and prevention. Even kindergarten students participated with Curtis Tighe and Matthew Manary showing the greatest flames. Chosen for Mrs. Eastmure's class were drawings of Ben DeCarlo and Stacey Finney. Miss Hill's class chosen were Chassidy Rogers and Kenny Mott. Mrs. Clarke had winners in Kenny Ablett and Amy Davidson.

Though he served as a student minister at St. Margaret's Anglican church a way back in the early thirties people have always remembered the Rev. Alfred Dowdell, affectionately known as Alfie. The Rev. Dowdell held services in Essonville, Wilberforce and Highland Grove. To get to Highland Grove he sometimes had to walk over the railway tracks and return the same way, a distance of eleven miles. He married a local girl, Katie Saunders. They had a summer cottage in this area for years and were always welcomed back when they returned. When necessary the Rev. Dowdell could play the organ at the church to accompany the hymns. The last few years have found him in very poor health and we regret to say that he has passed away and will rest from now on in the Cobourg cemetery. Sympathy goes out to family members.

Snippets of news: A new furnace has been installed in the Lloyd Watson Centre by Walkers of Haliburton. Until this was completed, Monmouth Senior Citizens held their meetings in Tory Hill at the Recreation Centre. At the recent Agricultural dinner, admirers of Clarence Rowbottom were seeking his autograph. Violet Bowen has come home from the hospital at last. Best wishes for the future. Ron Mumford is also home from his stay in Kingston General. Good luck Ron. A new roof is being installed on the Real Estate office occupied by Rishor, Barnes and Dietrich.

Canada Post has issued a 39 cent stamp commemorating the centennial birthday of Agnes McPhail. She was the first female Member of Parliament and Canada's first woman delegate to the League of Nations. When shopping for birthday or anniversary cards don't be tempted by those that are extra large. The biggies measuring more than 150 mm x 245 mm, or 6" x 9-1/2" will cost an added 10 cents in postage.

Firemen make a splash at school

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

"Awesome" was the word that best describes students' reaction at Wilberforce Elementary School as they watched the village's volunteer firemen run through their paces.

The firemen were at the school on Friday for Fire Prevention Week, which was kicked off on Saturday at an open house at the Monmouth Fire Hall.

Following a very well organized fire drill, the students and teachers of Wilberforce Elementary got the chance to watch three firemen demonstrate how the fire hose works on the front lawn of the school. Each of the students were invited to help Deputy Fire Chief Ted Nottage command the hose while trying to douse fireman John Barker, who volunteered at act as a target.

"It's just like holding a garden hose," says Paul Rivers, Grade 3. "I could have held it myself."

As each of the 50 students took a crack at holding the hose, many came away and asked teacher Darlene Hill if they could take a turn in front of the spray. Her answer was a definite No.

When each of the kids had a chance to hold the hose, Fire Chief Ralph Watson let the youngsters get a good look at the department's new fire engine.

"Is that the alarm?" asked one student... "Can you turn it on?" suggested another. Chief Watson obliged, and everyone covered their ears.

Following the demonstration outside, an assembly was held and the children asked the firemen questions. "What is your suit made out of?" "Where did you get those helmets?" "What is the air tank for?"

Principal Ted Glendinning thanked the firemen for coming in to talk to the children, and congratulated the kids on their performance during the drill. He promised that more drills would be held in the near future and told the kids to always be prepared.

By the end of the day, just about every youngster had decided what they want to be when they grow up — a fireman.

But adults were also welcomed to take a closer look at the department's brand new fire engine that was purchased in August at a cost close to $100,000.

"We wanted to give the tax payers a chance to see the new truck," said Watson at Saturday's open house. "When we are on call, they never get chance to look at it."

This is the first year that the department has held an open house, and Watson is hopeful that this will become an annual event.

The school's fire drill gave students the opportunity to hose down a volunteer fireman.

sions. When the Community Concert Series happens on the same evening many of the group attend that event together.

Kathleen Owens, Elva Cooper, Earl and I attended the baptism in North bay of our granddaughter, Daphne, at Christ Church Anglican where the incumbent, the Rev. Ellam officiated.

Jim and Shirley Cowling were amongst the fifty or more who attended the Haliburton County Farmers' Association supper on October 13. It was pot luck and delicious! Supper was followed by a dance and more people arrived at the Survey Camp location on Deep Bay Road for this part of the evening.

Jim and Shirley also attended a planning meeting on Monday evening at Charlie Tyler's.

In two weeks a Country Bumpkin — Youth Night is planned at the Cowling's on the Irish Line. Anyone interested in this costume party is invited to phone 754-4386 or get in touch with Greg Morney 457-3742 for details.

discipline will help them all through life.

Mr. Ken Goodall spoke to the members at the last General Meeting on the Boy Scout progress. We appreciated this feedback on our sponsorship.

All members are urged to attend the next General Meeting on November 1, when Zone Commander Ken Bell will do his annual inspection. Also, we will vote by ballot to decide whether or not Branch 129 will sponsor the Bluegrass Festival next year.

We have hosted several bus tours recently. This Thursday we will have 95 people from Belleville Legion visiting our Branch. On Sunday, October 21, a bus will take Branch 129 band and members to the Remembrance Memorial Service in Brechin. On November 4, Branch 129 members will be in Minden on parade from the firehall for the Cairn Service which will begin at 2:30 p.m. Our own Memorial Service will be in the Legion Hall at 10:00 a.m. for the service at the cenotaph at 11:00 a.m. on Saturday, November 10. Because this change will allow members to attend the church of their choice on Sunday, and in order to have our padre attend all functions, and in order that out of town veterans might better be able to attend the Veterans' dinner on the Saturday night, it has been voted unanimously by our membership to hold our Memorial Day on November 10, for this year.

HUNTER ALDRIDGE — In loving memory of a dear husband, dad, grandpa and Poppa who passed away October 14, 1985. Wonderful memories woven in gold. This is a picture we tenderly hold. Deep in our heart, a memory is kept. To love, to Cherish, never to forget. Lovingly remembered by Gladys, Grant, June & Cory, Eddie, Karen Christopher and Jonathan.
32-B-17

MAUGHAN, WILLIAM — In loving memory of dear husband, father & grandfather who passed away October 16, 1988. We think of you today with love. As we have always done. We feel again the sudden blow. That never should have come. Each morning that we awake. And know that you are gone. No one knows the heartache. As we try to carry on. They say that time heals everything. But we know this isn't so. Because it hurts as much today. As it did two years ago. Today, tomorrow and our whole life through. We will forever love and remember you. Missed by wife Joyce and family.
